WOMAN MONSTER SAID TO STILL BE ALIVE

Woman Arrested by Detectives on New York Central Train Was Not the Laporte Wholesale Murderess

Physician, After Careful Examination, Reports Body Found in Burned House Was Not That of Mrs. Belle Gunness.

FRANKLIN, PA., May 9—Mrs. E. B. Heeron, arrested in Syracuse, N. Y., on suspicion of being Mrs. Belle Gunness, the Laporte arch-murderess, lives in this county about eight miles from here. She resides with her mother, Mrs. Lucy Burton. Mrs. Heeron was reared in this vicinity and is well known here. Her husband died in the south last winter and Mrs. Heeron brought the body here for burial. Since then she has been in Chicago much of the time, but had arranged to spend the summer with her mother.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., May 9—The woman supposed to be Mrs. Belle Gunness, alleged murderess from Laporte, Ind., was arrested on a New York Central railroad train between this city and Utica shortly after one o'clock this morning, while asleep in her berth.

She had boarded the train in Ashtabula, Ohio, accompanied by an elderly woman, whose name is not known.

The woman was pointed out by a traveling man, who told the Rochester police of his suspicions. The train had left Rochester, however, before his clue could be investigated, and the police of Syracuse were notified by wire to board the train when it reached there and question the suspect.

When the train pulled into Syracuse the detectives boarded it, and locating the woman, who was in her berth, woke her up and ordered her to dress. They then began to question her. The train in the meantime had pulled out for Utica, where it was due at 2:31 this morning.

The detectives accompanied her on the train to Utica. While the identification was not positive, it was sufficiently satisfactory for the police to act and hold the woman until Chicago detectives can be brought on to establish her identity beyond question.

Laporte, Ind., May 9—After a careful and scientific examination of the body now held by the coroner, and generally supposed to be that of Mrs. Belle Gunness, Dr. Harry H. Long, of Laporte, today stated unqualifiedly that the burned corpse was not that of the Mistress of the Laporte "House of Horror." He said:

"The body at the morgue is that of a rather plump woman, weighing about 160 pounds. Mrs. Gunness weighed 225 pounds. The arm of the body at the morgue is well formed and rounded. Mrs. Gunness' arms were not. The body is almost five inches shorter than the body of Mrs. Gunness would be under the same circumstances. The body is that of a recent victim, and it is not that of Mrs. Gunness. I am sure of that."

Laporte, Ind., May 9—Two, possibly three, more victims were added to the Gunness charnel house list yesterday when the complete skeleton of a woman and what appeared to be the bones of two additional bodies were exhumed. Word also came from the Chicago officials that they have information that Mrs. Gunness is alive and also that an examination of the premises she formerly occupied in Austin is likely to disclose many additional murders.

Dicovery of a blood covered ax and a trunk containing important letters that will shed light on the mystery of the Gunness murders followed the exhumation of the tenth body from the lime-filled murder farm that now occupies the shocked attention of the nation.

The trunk, the porperty of Ray Lamphere, accused of the murder of Mrs. Gunness and her three children, was found in a barn at the Wheatbrook farm, near Springville, where he had been employed since February 5, after his quarrel with Mrs. Gunness.

After learning of the trunk seizure last night Attorney Worden, counsel for Lamphere, was refused admission to the jail. He thereupon announced that he would seek his client's release on a writ of habeas corpus.

In the trunk were letters written to the prisoner by Mrs. Gunness entreating him to return to the murder mansion. In one of the letters, which are being examined by Prosecuting Attorney Smith, Sheriff Smutzer and Chicago detectives, was this paragraph:

"Come back to me. You must come back. You may bring your new sweetheart with you, provided she has money enough."

Many other letters were found, which the prosecuting attorney promised to make public. In the trunk were found a number of women's gold rings, some of them jeweled. Whether any of them were the property of Mrs. Gunness or of possible women victims of the murder farm slaughters is a question for the authorities to determine.

A few hous after the trunk had been seized at John Wheatbrook's farm and secretly brought to Laporte, Lamphere summoned a friend to the jail. He knew nothing about the discovery of his property. When his friend reached the jail Lamphere said to him:

"I think I have something that I can say to the public without hurting my case. I want you to go to my attorney, Mr. Worden. Tell him I want to see him and that I want some clean clothes, and also tell him, for God's sake, to send to the barn at Wheatbrook's farm and get my trunk Wheatbrook will show any one he sends for it where it is. I want it taken away from there."

Hours before this message was delivered to Lamphere's attorney detectives had found the trunk and had brought it here. More important revelations are expected after the contents of the trunk have been examined.

The telltale ax, reddened with blood believed to have coursed through human veins, was found on the Gunness farm in a wood shed, buried under a

AGAINST SENDING TROOPS INTO TOBACCO DISTRICT AND TROUBLE IS LOOKED FOR.

Threats Being Made by Sympathizers of Night Riders Soldiers Patroling Threatened District.

Manchester, O., May 9—Troop A, of Cleveland, is today patroling the Ohio side of the Ohio river to prevent an invasion by Kentucky riders. The feeling against the sending of troops is very bitter both on the Ohio and Kentucky sides, and fears are entertained that the troops will be fired on from ambush. Although no attack has yet been made on the troops in spite of reports, threats are being made by both Ohio and Kentucky sympathizers with the night riders Columbus troops and a company of the Seventh regiment are busy patroling the threatened district.

ATTEMPTED MASSACRE

OF BAPTISTS RESULTS IN THE DEATH OF TWO AND FIFTY WERE INJURED.

Alleged to Have Been Planned by Priest of Orthodox Church—Stock Killed. Crops Destroyed.

St. Petersburg, May 9—Two women were killed and 50 men and women injured in an all day fight of Baptists planned by the priest of an orthodox church in the Novo-Ospe district of the Voronezh province today. The Baptists were invited to the conference for the purpose of discussing doctrinal differences. When they arrived they found members of the orthodox church armed with axes, scythes, knives and agricultural implements. A local priest gave the signal and led the onslaught. The Baptists unarmed, were unable to resist. Those were pursued to their homes and the angry religionists continued their attack and killed all their stock and destroyed the crops.

GUARDS CONFESS

TO HAVING ACTED IN CONJUNCTION WITH FIREMEN IN FIRING BUILDINGS.

Confess to Having Applied Torch to Philippine Village on Jamestown Exhibition Grounds.

Norfolk, Va., May 9.—Four members of the Jamestown Exposition Fire department and two of the Powhattan Guards were yesterday held by Justice Backus for the next Norfolk county grand jury upon the charge of arson. Two of the men filed written confessions hat they started the fire on the grounds which destroyed the Philippine village and other buildings ten days ago. They said it was understood that Fireman Miller recommended a cut in both forces and salaries and they thought a fire would demonstrate the value of both the firemen and guards on the grounds.

The men held are C. H. Broughton, fireman, of Detroit, Mich.; J. F. Sharp, guard, of Jellico, Tenn.; Julius Storz, guard, of Iowa, Y. H. Huffman, fireman of Petersburg, Va; Edward Bryson, fireman of Wilmington, N. C., and A. B. Thrall fireman, of Wilkesbarre, Pa. Sharp and Broughton filed the written confessions. Sharp admitted having applied the torch.

MERE PLEASANTRY.

Whitesburg, Ky., May 9—In a feud battle between the Brown and Mitchell factions on the Letcher-Perry border Isaac Brown, of the Brown faction, was killed and Bib Brown of the same faction was desperately wounded. Will Mitchell, leader of the Mitchell gang, was fatally shot.

THE CAREY PILGRIMAGE.

Carey, O., May 9—The annual pilgrimage to Our Lady of the Consolation church at Carey will take place May 21. A large number of people have visited the shrine from almost every part of the world during the past year and 800 new members have been enrolled in the fraternity.

THAT FATAL WAGON.

Morehead, Ky., May 9—Henry Fraley shot and killed his brother, Geo. Fraley, last night. They quarreled over a piece of land. George was acquitted only a short time ago of the murder of Sebron Prophet, who was shot from ambush while riding on a water wagon.

STARDOM

WILL NOT SHINE FOR THIS OHIO GIRL WHO SPENT A LARGE FORTUNE.

Will Return to Her Columbus Home a Sadder and a Wiser Girl and Give Up Stage.

New York, May 9.—Students of the drama who have as yet failed to see the name of Claribell Spanier of Columbus, Ohio, in electric lights over the door of any Broadway theatre may find the reason in a story told last night to Charles S. Berry of the Berry Detective Agency.

After hearing a statement made by Miss Spaniel, who is 20 years old and whose father is a wholesale grocer in Ohio, Mr. Berry set to work to discover the whereabouts of several men.

Miss Spanier said that she had spent $10,000 in the furtherance of her ambition to become a star actress, and that the only starring tour upon which she embarked lasted only three weeks.

"I did not want to go through the drudgery of playing minor parts," said Miss Spanier, "and as I had $10,000 of my own I thought I could buy my way into stardom. Friends in Columbus had told me I had talent, and I came to New York ready to spend $10,000 in getting a fair hearing. I engaged nine actors and actresses, and bought $500 worth of scenery to say nothing of dresses and photographs. Our tour began in New Jersey and ended in Massachusetts, and we never made any money from the beginning to the end.

"After the tour I discovered that I had been overcharged for scenery. I tried to get my money back and the men laughed at me.

"I pawned a diamond ring for $500 in order that the members of my company might get back to his city from Pittsfield, Mass. I pawned other jewelry, but I never asked any of my relatives for a cent. Now that I have failed in my ambition to become a great actress my relatives want me to go home and forget the stage. I feel that I was badly treated and that if I had been given a fair opportunity I might have amounted to something. I shall now go back to Columbus and give up my idea of becoming a star."

WILL HOLD THEIR NATIONAL CONVENTION AT CHICAGO TOMORROW.

Little Talk of Ticket, But if Eugene V. Debs Consents He Can Head It.

Chicago, May 9—With the advance guard of Socialists arriving by every train to attend the national convention of the party's opening session, which will be held Sunday, it is generally admitted that the conservative wing of the organization is to be in control. There is little talk of the ticket. There is the same old sentiment for Eugene V. Debs. If he will consent to run he will surely head the ticket again. At a conference this afternoon some conclusion will probably be reached regarding the ticket.

WAS FLIGHT OF WRIGHT BROS.' AEROPLANE IN THE TEST TRIAL.

After They Have Beaten World's Record Will Give Public Exhibitions.

Manteo, N. C., May 9—The Wright Bros., of Dayton, Ohio, who yesterday gave a demonstration of their flying machine on the practically uninhabited sand dunes near the Kill Devil Hill life saving station think that in a few days they will be able to overcome the few difficulties that they encountered in operating their machine, and that their new steering gear, on which they are at work, will be perfected. The steering gear which gives them wonderful control over their flight, as was demonstrated yesterday, did not work to their satisfaction. They have however, planned a few minor changes, and are at work on them. When they are completed they expect without difficulty to successfully complete their tests.

After they have beaten the world's air navigation record as they intend to do before their tests here are completed they will give public demonstrations with their aeroplane. Their success at the demonstration yesterday when they were able to make the machine rise, fall or continue a flight close to the ground, leaves them confident today that their test will be successful as soon as the changes they have planned are made in the steering gear.

Himself Supreme in Letters Written to Senators

PRESIDENT PARAMOUNT

He Asserts as Commander-In-Chief of the Army and Navy

Senators Have Not Decided as Yet to Make Letters Public But May Do So Later.

Washington, May 9—Three members of the United States Senate have received letters from President Theodore Roosevelt within the last few days, declaring his supremacy as commander in chief in all matters referring to the control of the army and navy. Two letters have created intense feeling in the Senate, and it is not unlikely that they will precipitate a conference of Republican members. The letters, in every case, are in defense of his course in discharging without honor the negro soldiers said to have been guilty of shooting up the town of Brownsville, Tex., and his action in banishing Colonel William F. Stewart to an abandoned military post in a desert section of Arizona.

The third letter came Friday to Senator Stewart of Vermont. A few days ago, during the debate of the Brownsville case, Senator Stewart asked a question indicating that he had doubt as to the wisdom of extending to the President the power of passing on the innocence or guilt of ex-soldiers applying for reinstatement, in view of the fact that it appeared the President still believes all of the negroes to have been guilty of complicity in the affray.

The senator was surprised to receive from the President a letter bearing on both the Colonel Stewart and the Brownsville cases. Attached to the communication were letters to Senators Raynor and William Alden Smith, the one to Mr. Raynor asserting chiefly the President's right as commander in chief to deal with an officer in such manner as he pleased, while the one to Mr. Smith was confined to the Brownsville affair, and reiterated the President's belief that he had dealt with the case as conditions demanded.

The President went further still in his letter to Senator Stewart in addition to repeating much that he had said to the other senators. He declared that Senator Stewart, from the question he asked in the debate, appeared to be proceeding under a misapprehension of the duties of the President of the United States in connection with the army and navy. He quoted the law as he understood it, and denied that he was under any obligation to give to the discharged negro soldiers, or Colonel Stewart, any court of inquiry. Several paragraphs were devoted to a discussion of Col. Stewart's case and the fault of his which has put them in disrepute in army circles.

After this discussion the President wrote that in every community there is found maudlin sympathy with murderers and the Thaw case in New York is cited by him as an example.

None of the senators who have received letters from the White House have decided whether they will make them public. All have been asked to do so. Senator Smith of Michigan declined on the ground that it would be improper, and Senator Raynor is preparing to use the letter to him in a speech which he will make to the Senate denouncing the action of the President in banishing Col. Stewart to Fort Grant, Ariz.

Senator Raynor showed to several of his colleagues the letter he received, but thus far has made no disposition of it. Several senators said that the letters would have the effect of complicating the situation in regard to legislation in the interest of the innocent members of the battalion of negroes discharged on account of the Bdownsville affray. There are two bills before the Senate looking to that the Republican senators will hold a caucus for the discussion of the entire question, including the President's letters, early next week.

ALLEGED THAT TAX PAYERS OF STATE LOSE $1,000,000 ANNUALLY THROUGH OFFICIALS' LAX METHODS

Columbus, O., May 9—A loss of $1,000,000 a year to the people of Ohio is the result, declares Senators Fred Howe and John C. Drake of the above district, due to business methods and a remarkable system of taxing public service corporations by the treasurer of state, auditor of state, secretary of state, and state board of appraisers and assessors. Of this sum $900,000 is lost in interest, and $900,000 by small valuations placed on public service corporations. The majority report of the committee signed by Howe and Drake Democrats, and the minority report signed by Senator Frank Patterson Republican, of Ashland, were given to the senate today. The majority report is a severe arraignment of the methods employed by state officers.

CIRCUS

as Above the Average and Hundreds Saw It—The Rain and Cold Kept Many Away.

The Hagenbeck-Wallace circus has come and gone and it probably gave as much pleasure to those who witnessed it as any circus has in years The acts were new and up to date, well costumed, and the performers above the average The animal acts were especially good and round after round of applause greeted their work which was almost human.

The show reached here early in the morning from Columbus and the baggage and animals were unloaded early. The grounds where the tents were pitched was soft and some delay was caused in erecting them This until 11 o'clock that it started. A made the parade late and it was not tour of the principal streets was made and the excellent condition of the many horses attracted much favorable comment

The afternoon performance was well attended and the evening show was fairly well patronized The weather, however, a mean drizzle all day long kept many people away Those that did go were greatly pleased with the entire show from the band concert, which was excellent, to the final races that wound up the entertainment.

The gift of the management of 100 tickets to the poor school children of the city, was greatly appreciated by the board of education and the managers of the show would have been well satisfied if they could have seen the bright, happy faces of the youngsters who had never before seen a circus and may not see another for a long time.

It was a great time for them and they started in with the animal tent and saw the entire thing from start to finish It was the greatest day in their lives and one they will long remember

BRUMBACK SCHOOL CLOSED

Prof W H Orr closed a very successful term of school Wednesday in the Brumback district Despite the rainy weather and muddy roads, the patrons of the district and many from the adjoining districts, were seen wending their way toward the school house long before noon From the number of boxes and baskets that were carried to the school house it looked very much like an old fashion wood's picnic It is needless to say that a great deal of credit is due the ladies of the district for their hospitality in contributing toward making the day one of profit and enjoyment, as well as a day to be long remembered by both guest and pupil.

The most interesting game of the day was a spirited ball game which resulted in a score of 4 to 1 in favor of Fleatown of the Brumback school.

The day was concluded with a very interesting program by teacher and pupils There is evidently being great progress made in school teaching as compared with 20 years ago from the way Mr Orr controls his pupils and the power thep have in delivering recitations. Not only did the largest boy and girl, but the least tot in school delivered its recitation splendidly

The teacher by an interesting speech carried very forcibly the thought that the gods make room on the heights sublime for only those who are willing to climb."

The exercises were concluded by an exchange of gifts and wishes of many more such days

Good For Everybody.

Mr. Norman R. Coulter a prominent architect, in the Delbert building, San Francisco, says. "I fully endorse all that has been said of Electric Bitters as a tonic medicine. It is good for everybody. It corrects stomach, liver and kidney disorders in a prompt and efficient manner and builds up the system" Electric Bitters is the best spring medicine ever sold over a druggist's counter, as a blood purifier it is unequaled. 50c at F D Hall's drug store.

AMUSEMENTS

PLAYING AT THE MUSEE.

George Stoner, the singer, who has been in Cincinnati for several weeks past, has returned and accepted the position of singer and pianist at the Musee

SUMMER SEASON BEGUN.

The Auditorium theater will open its summer season of moving pictures and illustrated songs tonight. The theater is all in readiness for the continuous shows and presents a very neat appearance The foyer has been beautifully decorated with artificial palms and ferns with entrance aisle on one side and an exit on the other Mr Starling Morse has been chosen secretary and treasurer for the summer season, to assist Mr. Jame Hall, who is managing the picture attractions.

NEWARK PEOPLE MAKE HIT.

"Moore, the Mystifier," Newark's clever magician, who is spending his summer vacation at home in this city, made another great hit at the Orphium Friday night, as a special attraction, in spite of the fact that the big circus was in town. Moore's trunk trick is an original feat of deception that is truly wonderful. The magician enters the trunk, which is thoroughly examined by disinterested persons, has it closed and locked upon him Then a stout canvas covering is laced over the trunk, a circular cabinet is lowered over the trunk and within 40 seconds, last night, Moore emerged panting from the trunk The lock was apparently untouched and the laces in the canvas remained intact.

Miss Ada Melrose, who is Mrs Moore, in private life, was also added to Manager Lawrie's big extra bill on Friday night, and her portion of the program was also a decided success Miss Melrose introduces a very interesting and clever soubrette turn and is equally winning in all her singing and dancing. But her imitation of a "Saturday Nighter" in the drinking song, was a scream and brought an uproar of applause from the crowd of appreciative Orphium patrons.

Manager Lawrie's efforts in securing such an excellent addition to this week's bill for a Friday night feature, is indeed praiseworthy and in accordance with the progressive Sun & Murray stndard.

Very Serious

It is a very serious matter to ask for one medicine and have the wrong one given you. For this reason we urge you in buying to be careful to get the genuine—

THEDFORD'S BLACK-DRAUGHT Liver Medicine

The reputation of this old, reliable medicine, for constipation, indigestion and liver trouble, is firmly established. It does not imitate other medicines. It is better than others, or it would not be the favorite liver powder, with a larger sale than all others combined.

SHOWER OF GOLD COINS.

MR. C. G. McKUNE.

At Golden Wedding of Mr. and Mrs. G. G. McKune, Colorado Springs, Colo., Celebrating Fifty Years of Happy Wedded Life.

After fifty years of married life Mr. and Mrs. G. G. McKune, of 5 West Costilla street, celebrated their golden wedding. They were married in Damascus, N. Y. There was one person present at the wedding ceremony who is still alive—Mr. J. K. Dillon, of 417 East Pike's Peak avenue, a nephew of Mrs. McKune.

The celebration took place at their home, which was beautifully decorated in gold and white.

The happy couple were the recipients of many beautiful presents, including a shower of gold coins.

In an interview with our representative Mr. McKune states.

"It gives me great pleasure to tell you that I have been using a little of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey for medicinal purposes every morning for fifteen years; it has been my only medicine, and I firmly believe it has been very beneficial to me as a tonic stimulant and renewer of youth. I am seventy years of age, and I feel as hale and hearty as I did twenty years ago.

"I cannot say too much in praise of your valuable medicinal whiskey, and recommend it to all those getting on in years who wish to maintain their vigor, strength and happiness."

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

is an absolutely pure distillation of malted grain; great care being used to have every kernel thoroughly malted, thus destroying the germ and producing a predigested liquid food in the form of a malt essence, which is the most effective tonic stimulant and invigorator known to science; softened by warmth and moisture its palatability and freedom from injurious substances render it so that it can be retained by the most sensitive stomach.

It cures nervousness, typhoid, malaria, every form of stomach trouble, all diseases of the throat and lungs, and all run-down and weakened conditions of the body, brain and nerves. It is prescribed by doctors and is recognized as a family medicine everywhere.

CAUTION.—When you ask your druggist, grocer or dealer for Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey be sure you get the genuine. It's the one absolutely pure medicinal malt whiskey and is sold in sealed bottles only; never in bulk. Price $1.00. Look for the trade-mark, the "Old Chemist," on the label, and make sure the seal over the cork is unbroken. Write Dr. R. Curran, Consulting Physician, for a free illustrated medical booklet and free advice. Duffy Malt Whiskey Co., Rochester, N. Y.

A CONVENTION PRIMER

FIRST NATIONAL CONVENTIONS.

Were candidates for president and vice president always nominated at national conventions?

No. Previous to 1830 they were nominated largely by congressional caucuses or by state legislatures.

When and where were the first national conventions held?

At Philadelphia in September, 1830, the so called Anti-Masonic party held the first political national convention more than two years before the presidential election; but, instead of making nominations, it adjourned to meet in Baltimore Sept. 26, 1831, when William Wirt was nominated for president and Amos Ellmaker for vice president. The National Republicans met in national convention at Baltimore Dec. 12, 1831, and nominated Henry Clay for president and John Sergeant for vice president. The Democrats first met in national convention at Baltimore May 21, 1832, where Van Buren was nominated for vice president. Jackson was so unanimously accepted as the candidate for re-election that only a resolution was passed declaring that the convention "cordially concurred in the repeated nominations that General Jackson had received in various parts of the country for re-election as president."

Was any platform adopted at these conventions?

No. Following the conventions of the Anti-Masonic party and the National Republicans an address to the people was issued by each. The Democrats issued no address, but a resolution was passed declaring that "in place of a general address from this body" the delegations should address their respective constituents on the political issues of the day.

There will be a meeting of the T. M. A. Sunday at 9 a. m. in the band room on East Church street. George Hamilton, President. Matt Smith, Secretary.

Bad Weather for Farmers.

The wet weather of the past few days has caused the farmers to lie awake nights wondering when they are going to get a chance to prepare for corn planting. And those who have lately gotten in their oats are worrying whether the grain is going to rot or will survive the excessive soaking process.

Sunday School Convention.

The 20th session of the Sunday School and Women's Mite Missionary Semi-Annual Convention of the eastern presiding elder's district of the North Ohio Conference, branch of the A. M. E. church, is now being held in the A. M. E. church, this city, and will continue through Sunday evening. An extended program is being carried out.

Leasing Land.

Mr. A. H. Jones of Newark has been here for several days leasing land for the Everett Gas and Oil company. He is meeting with fair success. This company has valuable holdings in a number of gas and oil fields. Several years ago this company leased several hundred acres of land in this vicinity, but surrendered the leases without testing the territory.—Somerset News.

Newark's Early Musicians.

The Advocate is sure the readers, young and old, will read with great pleasure and interest the article in another column of this paper by the veteran band leader, Mr. Joseph Simpson, now of Columbus, but for many years one of the most conspicuous of Newark's musicians. Although most of the men he writes of have passed over, there are still living many who will recall the scenes described. It is a picture of Newark's village days which all will highly appreciate

Circus to Zanesville.

The Pan Handle railroad took the Hagenbeck-Wallace circus from here to Zanesville last night by way of Trinway. The B. & O. takes the show from Zanesville to Wheeling, then to Washington, Pa., and then into Pittsburg.

Will Open Office Here.

Dr. William J. Kennedy, who for the past five or six years has been practicing his profession in Washington, D. C., has removed to Newark, and will have his office in the Trust building. Dr. Kennedy is a brother of Mr. Frank P. Kennedy.

Mr. Gibbs Granted Patent.

Supt. W. A. Gibbs, of the Ohio Electric Railway company's C. N. & Z. division, has been granted a patent on a ticket separating and counting machine. Mr. Gibbs has been working on the machine for a long time, and it has been completed and in operation for several weeks.

A Convention Primer.

The Advocate on page three today begins publication of a series of nine short articles under the caption "A Convention Primer." Each will give important information concerning past and coming national conventions and as this is presidential election year, the facts presented in the nine articles will be well worth noting.

With Cleveland Troop.

Attorney Walter Flory, of Cleveland, the son of Attorney J. A. Flory, of this city, is a member of Cavalry Troop B of Cleveland, which was called to the tobacco feud in Kentucky. Mr. Flory has been a member of the troop since residing in Cleveland, and rather expects to witness an encounter before the men are called home.

Somewhat Improved.

The condition of Rodney Ernest, the commercial traveler who fainted on the street at Church and Third, on Friday, is reported slightly improved Saturday, and the man is conscious a part of the time. Mr. Ernest is an old acquaintance of Dr. W. H. Knauss who states that he shows symptoms of uremic poisoning. He is being cared for at the city hospital.

Will Sing at St. Louisville.

The Aeolian quartet, composed of Messrs. J. W. Hoover, first tenor, W. W. Nusbaum second tenor, T. Howard Jones baritone, and Wm. H. Reynolds bass, has been engaged to appear at St. Louisville at the commencement exercises tonight. The class address will be delivered by Prof. F. B. Willis of Ohio Northern University. The quartet goes to Etna Thursday afternoon, and has later engagements at the commencements of the Croton, Belleville and Malta schools.

Street Damaged.

The city did not make much yesterday from the license money paid into the treasury by the circus, for the heavy wagons damaged the pavement on West Locust street on one side not less than $200 worth. Possibly there is no one to blame other than the weather man but to prevent such a condition in the future or to fix it so that the city could recover in case of damage there should be a long-page ordinance passed at once making plain what streets can be used for excessive loads and what width of tires of wagons and trucks for certain weights, and some one be assigned to the duty of enforcing the ordinance when it is passed.

Best Healer In the World.

Rev. F. Starbird, of East Raymond, Maine, says: "I have used Bucklen's Arnica Salve for several years, on my old army wound, and other obstinate sores, and find it the best healer in the world. I use it too with the greatest success in my veterinary business." Price 25c at F. D. Hall's drug store.

Some men are satisfied with nothing short of the long green.

"HIPPO"

Of the Hagenbeck-Wallace Show Reported to Have Died in Newark on Friday.

It was reported on the streets Saturday, that the hippopotamus of the Hagenbeck-Wallace shows had died in this city Friday night, just before the circus pulled out for Zanesville.

Inquiries of the railway officials disclosed the fact that they were not aware of it if such was the case. The cage containing the "hippo" left the parade at Fourth and West Main streets, and this gave rise to the rumor that the animal was ill. It was probably taken back after the parade to save trouble in hauling the heavy load back over the soft earth of the show ground. The cage and animal, together, weighed several thousand pounds and would have been very difficult to haul over soft earth.

STRICKEN WITH PARALYSIS

Mrs. Walker, wife of Mr. Charles Walker, residing two miles east of St Louisville, started from her home with her husband at an early hour on Saturday morning, for Newark, to attend market. Upon arriving here she attempted to get out of the wagon, when she complained that she felt numb and was unable to stand on her feet alone. Her sister, who lives in Madison township, supported her for several minutes, when it was seen that something unusual was the matter with her and she was assisted into the City Drug Store and Dr. McCullough called. The doctor found that she had been stricken with paralysis, her right side having been affected. She was cared for by her husband.

NEWARK'S ANNUAL MAY MEETING

(By Webster P. Huntington.)

The Democrats of Licking county held their annual May meeting in Newark on the 2d inst. It is a great affair, socially as well as politically, and also has no little importance as a business event, for incident to the gathering of the electors from all parts of the county, there is no little trading and buying in the city stores and negotiating. The occasion is not unlike a county fair, except that ostensibly it is for politics. The people of the county seat turn out, the villages are well represented and the farmers come in from the rural districts, to spend the day in politics and to "look around".

This May meeting is an ancient institution in Licking county and comes as near serving the purposes of home rule as any political law or custom in the state of Ohio. It comes nearer to the old-fashioned New England town meetings, upon which were founded the destinies of American liberties from colonial days, than any political gathering or method of transacting political business in this state, so far as we know. Everybody is welcome at the Newark May meeting; nobody is barred: there is a full and free discussion; principles are adopted and candidates nominated, and if any bad government results the voters of the county have only themselves to blame for their mistakes or their indifference.

Such an institution is not practical in centers of large population, but it is entirely practical in many Ohio counties. The new primary law passed by the present Legislature will abolish the Licking county May meeting, in connection with some of its other blunders. Such a thing cannot be regarded otherwise than as a misfortune. It is a great pity that the constitution of Ohio, as interpreted by the decision of the Supreme court on the subject of uniform legislation, is not elastic enough to permit the various counties of the state to conform to their several ideals regarding political procedure and thus insure the benefits of home rule to all the people. Some day this must be done unless Buckeye human nature has lost the heritage of true Americanism which it received in the early days from New England the Virginias.

BIG SPECULATION IN COINS.

Mottoless Gold Money Kept From Circulation In Hope of Premium.

A new form of speculation has developed at Washington and in other parts of the country. The speculators are interested in the fate of the bill restoring to the St. Gaudens twenty dollar gold piece the motto "In God We Trust" and are withholding from circulation an immense amount of gold coin, which, treasury officials say, is having an effect on banking firms.

Persons informed on the subject assert that when the bill to restore the motto to coins was introduced in the house bank clerks and other knowing ones promptly began to convert their ready money into the gold pieces in the expectation that a premium would be placed on them by collectors.

Introduction of the bill caused a run on the treasury department, and the coin went to a premium of about $2. When the bill passed the house the premium went higher. The bill is now before the senate committee on the judiciary.

Several of the pieces sold for $30 in Washington a few days ago, and it is said that one of the speculators, a Chinese merchant, has several thousand dollars invested in the coins.

Canvas Cover For Baseball Diamond.

Manager Fred C. Clarke of the Pittsburg baseball club has ordered a cover for the infield at Exposition park. The cover is in the nature of an experiment, but if successful will make it possible for the Pirates to play every scheduled game at home unless rain falls continuously during an afternoon when they are scheduled to perform at home. Many devices for protecting the infields from rain have been tried, and some have been found to be successful in a measure. He is having a low truck or carriage built, about 8 by 20 feet, with very wide wheels or rollers, which will not cut into the diamond. It will take about six men to handle the machine, but its use will cut out the "wet grounds" reason for postponing all games. There are very few days when the outfield is too wet to play on. It is always the condition of the diamond which causes postponements.

The only advantage about looking for trouble is that you may be prepared to dodge it when it comes.

Laugh and the world laughs with you, which is much better than being laughed at.

THE CONQUEROR MAKES INITIAL TRIP.

LEO STEVENS AND A. HOLLAND FORBES IN THE BASKET OF THE CONQUEROR.

North Adams, Mass., May 9—Following the christening of his new balloon, the Conqueror, by his daughter, Miss Natalie, and in the presence of his wife and about 5000 spectators, A. Holland Forbes, of New York, made a flight, the initial one for his balloon, of about 70 miles in an air line from this city, landing at Canton Center, Conn., after having been in the air for five hours and 40 minutes.

Mr. Forbes, who piloted his own balloon, his first trip as a licensed pilot under the rules of the Aero Club of America, was accompanied by Leo Stevens, builder of the balloon and W. F. and H. J. Whitehouse, all of New York. The balloon carried 1800 pounds of sand ballast.

Mr. Forbes declared the trip the hardest he had ever undertaken, and Mr. Stevens said it was the coldest in his experience of many ascensions. At one time the balloon attained an altitude of more than two miles, it being sent up to that height in the hope of finding a steady current of wind.

Much of the time they were above the clouds, and at the highest altitude the aeronauts found it bitterly cold. They had no overcoats or extra clothing with them, and suffered greatly from the cold. More than half of the time, practically all of the first portion of the trip they were above the clouds and had no view of the earth except in momentary glimpses. At one time they witnessed a beautiful rainbow effect upon the clouds.

YOU MUST IRRIGATE YOUR NEIGHBORHOOD

(By Herbert Kaufman.)

Half a century ago there were ten million acres of land within a thousand miles of Chicago upon which not even a blade of grass would grow. Today upon these very deserts are wonderful orchards and tremendous wheatfields. THE SOIL ITSELF WAS FULL OF POSSIBILITIES. WHAT THE LAND NEEDED WAS WATER. In time there came farmers who knew that they could not expect the streams TO COME TO THEM, and so they dug ditches and LED THE WATER TO THEIR PROPERTIES from the surrounding rivers and lakes; they tilled the earth with their BRAINS as well as their PLOWS—they became rich by understanding HOW TO IRRIGATE.

Advertising has made thousands of men rich just because they recognized the possibilities of utilizing the newspapers to bring streams of buyers into neighborhoods that could be made busy locations by irrigation—BY DRAWING PEOPLE FROM OTHER SECTIONS.

The successful retailer is the man who keeps the stream of purchasers coming his way. It isn't the SPOT ITSELF that makes the STORE pay—it's the MAN who makes the SPOT pay; who knows how to DRAW THE CROWDS. Centers of trade are not selected by the public—they are created by the force which CONTROLS the public—the newspapers.

New neighborhoods for business are being constantly built up by men who have located themselves in streets which they have changed from deserted by-ways into teeming, jostling thoroughfares through advertising irrigation.

The storekeeper who whines that his neighborhood holds him back is squinting at the truth—HE IS HURTING THE NEIGHBORHOOD.

If it lacks streams of buyers he can easily enough secure them by reaching out through the columns of the daily and inducing people from OTHER sections to come to him. Every time he influences a customer of a competitor he is not only irrigating his own field but is drying out the streams upon which a non-advertising merchant depends for existence. Men and women who live next door to a shop that does not plead for their custom will eventually be drawn to an establishment miles away because they have been made to believe in some advantage to be gained thereby.

The circulation of every daily is nothing less than a reservoir of buyers from which shoppers stream in the direction that promises the most value for the least money.

The magic development of the desert lands has its parallel in merchandising of men who consider the newspaper an irrigating power which can make two customers grow where one grew before.

WORTHLESS CHECKS WRITTEN BY ARCHIE STONE WHO IS UNDER ARREST.

HAS RELATIVES HERE

And He May be Positively Identified Before the Day is Over—Arrested at Phalen's Grocery.

The police department made another good catch Friday afternoon about 3:30, when they arrested a man giving his name as Archie Stone, and his residence as Pittsburg, and charged with attempting to pass worthless checks on Newark merchants. So far as is known none of the checks have been cashed.

Stone attempted to pass his first check Thursday night at the Griggs store as reported last night in the Advocate. He purchased an umbrella worth $2.50, and tendered in payment check drawn on W. J. Henderson, the plumber. Mr. W. H. Mazey, the manager of the store, refused to cash the check, and after Mr Henderson had been communicated with, and denied having written a check for any such amount, the police were notified and a description of the man furnished them.

Stone then visited the grocery of Patrick Phalen and tried to cash a check for $50. This one was made payable to W. G. Miller and signed Arthur Stone. While the check he attempted to pass on the Griggs store was drawn on the Franklin National bank, the one he attempted to pass on Mr. Phalen was on the Newark Trust company. Mr. Phelan was suspicious and called the police. Chief Zergieber sent Officers Sutton and Stewart to the store and Stone was placed under arrest.

The patrol was called and he was locked up, slated for investigation. When searched at the city prison 58 cents, two razors, a knife, pocketbook and ring were found on his person. Officers Hager and Carroll were then detailed on the case and to look up other checks that he attempted to cash. In one of his pockets was found a check for $65, made payable to Samuel Johnson and signed by W. J. Henderson. In another pocket was found some blank checks of the Newark Trust company, and of the Farmers' Deposit bank of Pittsburg.

Later it was discovered by the police that he had visited the saloon of Fromholtz & Brown and attempted to cash a check for $20 and when refused he then wanted one cashed for $10. This was refused him also, and as far as can be learned by the police he has not been able to get any money for his worthless bits of paper.

He was given his hearing this morning, and as several men positively identified him, he was sent to the county jail under $500 bond. It is thought Stone will be identified before the day is over, for he is thought to have relatives in this city.

NOT GOOD UNLESS STAMPED

The workingman lay dying.
With an hour or two to spare.
And his pastor with the Bible
Had been called to see him there.
The minister was ready
With the Book to read a line
That would light the unknown journey
From the human to divine.
He had opened to the passage.
When the workingman, so weak
He could hardly raise a finger
And could only faintly speak,
Gazed feebly at the Bible
Which the pastor held, and shook
His head in disapproval
Of the use of such a Book.
The pastor was astonished,
For the man was not the kind
Who scoffs at things eternal
And wants to go it blind.
The man made signs and whispered,
He raised his thin, white hand
In protest, and he struggled
To have him understand.
At last the pastor tumbled,
And without the book he prayed,
For the workingman had noticed
That it wasn't union made.

CASE AGAINST A. A TAYLOR GOES OVER TO NEXT TERM OF COURT.

Common Pleas Decisions, Real Estate Transfers and General News of the Courts.

The criminal case of the State of Ohio vs. A. A. Taylor, charged with practicing medicine unlawfully, came up in the Probate Criminal court on Saturday, on a motion filed by Attorneys Smythe & Smythe, representing the defendant, to quash the information. The defendant claimed that the information was not supported by proper affidavits and should therefore be quashed. Probate Judge Brister held that information filed originally in the Probate court and not upon transcripts with proper affidavits from the justice's or mayor's courts must be supported by affidavits, but that information based on transcripts filed from lower courts, supported by proper affidavits in those courts, did not require additional affidavits. The court herefore overruled the motion to quash. Attorney Smythe then immediately filed a demurrer to the information on the ground that the information did not properly set out the venue, as it did not state that the crime was committed in Ohio, but in Licking county only. The court also overruled the demurrer and defendant gave notice of exceptions. Defendant then demanded a jury trial, and the case was continued until the next term of court.

Common Pleas Court.

In the case of Larus, Altheimer & Co., vs. Archie Goodin, a suit in attachment, the court heard the evidence and discharged the attachment. Kibler & Montgomery: Flory & Flory.

All motions for new trials will be heard next Saturday morning.

P. H. Nisley vs. Benj. Cooper et al; some vs. Elisha Baker, and same vs. Roderick McKeet et all, suits to quiet title to real estate. Ordered that titles be quieted in plaintiff. Slabough.

Juvenile Court Judges.

Judge C W. Seward of Newark, Judge F. M. Wickham of Delaware [illegible] held a joint session here Friday morning for the purpose of designating judges of the juvenile court. Judge Berry was designated for Knox county, Judge Brister for Licking county, and Judge Wickham for Delaware county. Captain Cohn is judge of the Probate court in Delaware county, but owing to his advanced years he does not care to take up the work as judge of the juvenile court.—Mt. Vernon Republican News.

Purchase Hibbert Property and Expect to Erect Handsome Lodge Quarters.

Messrs. T. W. Rutledge, Harry Rossel and Thomas Bucey, trustees for Licking Aerie of Eagles, No. 387, on Wednesday completed negotiations by which the Hibbert property on East Main street, which is the site of the residence of the A. H. Heisey family, was purchased by the lodge for the sum of $12,000 and will be used for a location for the club rooms and headquarters of the lodge.

The property which was exchanged Wednesday has a frontage of 75 feet and 10 inches and is 100 feet in depth. The residence of Mr. A. H. Heisey and family, which occupies a portion of the property, is under lease for two more years, after which time it is the intention of the lodge to fully equip the house for the purpose of making it an ideal club location.

On the east side of this property it is proposed to erect an additional building with store rooms on the ground floor and lodge rooms above. The structure will be probably three stories high.

No building or changes will take place just at present and probably not for a year or so.

The property which was purchased by the rapidly growing local aerie of Eagles is of the estate of the late Harry Hibbert, and has been in the ownership of his son. Edward Hibbert, who was represented in the deal by W. H. Chilcote.

The property is a most desirable one and will be subjected to a number of improvements when the lodge takes possession.

Even when an audience is cold it is apt to get hot at the thought of having paid real money for its seats.

Police Force on Duty Yesterday and the Best of Order Was Kept—Police Court News.

Nicolae Padue, charged by a fellow countryman, Pexsa Dimitra with pulling a knife on him and hitting him with a brick, was arranged before Mayor Atherton this morning and handed the fine usual in such cases.

Two people, man and wife, both colored, had a glorious mixup at the corner of Fourth and Main streets last night and both were arrested. The man found his wife in company with another man and the fight was on A glorious creation in the milliner's art, Merry Widow, costing all the way to $3, was torn and trampled in the melee and the woman is heart broken. She told the mayor all kinds of things this morning and to add zest to her case he fined her 5 for contempt of court.

Four plain drunks were also handed the usual prizes for intoxication cases.

Chief Zergiebel Captain Bell and the entire city squad of patrolmen, 25 in all, were on duty all day yesterday and the day men worked until late at night. The best of order was kept by the police both at the show grounds and on the street in the city. Not a burglary of any sort was reported to the police and nothing happened to mar the day in any way.

WOMAN MONSTER

Officials both here and from Chicago expressed the firm belief that there are still 25 bodies in the ground about the farm or in the sealed basement of the house

Eighteen deaths can be directly traced to "Queen of Murderers." The first theory that she perished in the fire which destroyed her home is rapidly being dispelled. There are many tangible reasons for this. First, the body was headless and no trace of the head has been found anywhere. Equally important is the fact that the body found with those of the children is much smaller than that of Mrs. Gunness. In life it could not have weighed more than 150 pounds, while Mrs. Gunness weighed more than 200 and was much taller Neighbors say the body taken away from the ruins does not in any way resemble that of Mrs. Gunness. Furthermore, the clothing bore no blood stains, while the clothing of the children was saturated with blood.

The belief grows that the decapitated woman had been dead several days before the fire. The band ring found in the ruins would be much too small for Mrs. Gunness, and there is no trace of her teeth, which were strongly marked by gold fillings. Fire would destroy neither the teeth nor the fillings, at least a fire that left the clothing practically intact.

The theory started that the Gunness farm formerly was owned by a physician, now long dead, and that the bodies were buried by him, is dispelled by the fact that several of the bodies are comparatively fresh, three of them positively identified by relatives The disintegration of the bodies so far discovered is not due to age, but to the use of quicklime.

Just a few days before the fatal fire, a young woman, whose description answers that of the body found in the ruins, was seen driving with Mrs. Gunness. No one knew her and she was seen but once. After that she mysteriously vanished.

Other developments of the day in the astounding tragedy investigation included the following:

That the mysterious trunks shipped from Chicago from time to time to Mrs. Gunness murder mansion contained quicklime instead of bodies of victims, as was first suspected.

That the quicklime used to hasten decomposition of her victim's bodies was purchased in Chicago and shipped by the woman's confederates because she dared not purchase such quantities in Laporte for fear of arousing suspicion.

That Emil C Greening, formerly employd by Mrs. Gunness at the time that Jennie Olson disappeared, saw a strange man and woman appear at the house the night before the Olson girl dropped from sight.

That Greening was told they were teachers in the school where Jennie was to be sent. Greening told relatives that the person in woman's clothes was a man and that he never saw Jennie after that night.

Exposure of a political controversy between the authorities here over the disposition of the case, the Democratic friends of Mayor Lemuel Darrow, law partner of Lamphere's attorney, seeking to create an opinion that Mrs. Gunness is still alive, while the sheriff a Republican, the state's attorney and the other authorities insist that the woman was the victim of the fire which destroyed her home.

Strengthening of the assertion of the state's attorney that Andrew Helgelein was murdered by Mrs. Gunness and an accomplice, said to be Lamphere, by the discovery that he met his death in an encounter in which he pulled out the hair of his assailants and lost his fingers, due to use of a knife, before he succumbed

Mysterious visits to the murder victims' crude burial place by the sheriff, chief of police and a doctor from Ft. Wayne, Ind., who are searching for a missing man believed to have fallen a victim to the Gunness slaughter matrimonial lure.

Traces of several possible victims of the woman's blood and money lust, particularly a horse trader who worked on the farm and was never seen again, though his horse and carriage afterward were driven by the woman of the house.

Meeting of the Laporte county commissioners, at which it was determined to raise $5,000, not as an award, but to defray the expenses of settling two questions:

"Is Lamphere guilty of murdering Mrs. Gunness and her three children lost in the fire?

"Is the body of the woman found in the Gunness fire that of Mrs. Gunness?"

Advancement of suicide theory in Mrs. Gunness' death by Lamphere's friends, based upon the woman's crazed actions the day before the fire in making her will and attempting to make sure that her attorney would know what she did with it

Determination of the sheriff to sift in the fire ruins Saturday or Monday in search of the missing head and teeth of the dead woman for the purpose of establishing identity of the body

Sheriff Smutzer admitted last night that the local authorities had enlisted the aid of Chicago detectives in an effort to solve the murder mystery that confronts the people of Laporte county There are now half a dozen imported sleuths here and throughout the vicinity. Last night one of them in conversation with one of the local officers, declared that the case was the hardest he had ever seen. Not much progress has been made beyond the discovery of additional evidence which, the state's attorney believes will strengthen his case against Lamphere.

DOESN'T ONLY RELIEVE BUT CURES YOU OF INDIGESTION

Why Not Make Up Your Mind Now and For All to Get Rid of Your Stomach Misery and Indigestion.

Nothing will remain undigested or sour on your stomach if you will eat one 22-grain Triangule of Diapepsin after your meal. This powerful digestive and antacid, though as harmless and pleasant as candy, will digest and prepare for assimilation into the blood 3,000 grains of food.

Eat what your stomach craves, without the slightest fear of a case of Indigestion or that you will be bothered with sour risings, Belching, Gas on Stomach, Heartburn, Headaches from stomach, Nausea, Bad Breath, Water Brash or a feeling like you had swallowed a lump of lead, or other disagreeable miseries.

If you will get from your pharmacist a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin you could always go to the table with a hearty appetite, and your meals would taste good, because you would know there would be no Indigestion or Sick Headache or Stomach misery all the next day; and, besides, you would not need laxatives or liver pills to keep your stomach and bowels clean and fresh.

These 50-cent cases contain more than enough to cure the worst dyspeptic, and of it sufficient to relieve other members of the family. There is nothing better known for Gas on the Stomach or sour odors from the stomach or to cure a Stomach Headache.

The complete formula is plainly printed on these 50-cent cases, and as soon as you read that, you will understand what a blessing you have, as Diapepsin couldn't harm any one.

You couldn't keep a handier or more useful article in the house.

For the first time in many days the sun came out from behind the clouds, and Manager Berryhill and the ball players were the happiest people in Newark. The rain and drizzle of the past few days have prevented them from playing, and day after day has seen another double header pile up on them.

Nine postponed games must now be played off, and every team in the league with the exception of Marion, has suffered. Lancaster has been able to play one out of ten games, Lima has one game postponed at her home lot, Mansfield has five postponed and Springfield has four.

At Lancaster the water has receded from the ball park but mud of every variety covers the diamond, and several days' work will be required to get it in playing condition. The local diamond has also suffered, but not to any great extent, for the drain tile in the infield and outfield has taken most of the water off.

Groundkeeper Sherman Barcus has been hard at work all morning and by 3 o'clock this afternoon they will be ready for the teams. Lima will make her first appearance here, and Laddy Linke, ex-Molder, is with them. He may work in tomorrow's game, and "Big Frank" Moore may work for Newark.

After the boys found there would be no game yesterday afternoon, they took in the circus and many players were there again in the evening. The Orphium and the picture shows also furnished them amusement.

They are all "on the bit" though, and more than willing to get back into the game again. The rest has become very tiresome and the boys are waiting anxiously for the warm days that are promised in a week or two.

Prize For Painters.

German painters are competing for a unique prize offered by the German emperor, says the Berliner Borsen Courier. The kaiser wishes to give to the Emperor Francis Joseph as a jubilee present a life size portrait of himself in the uniform of a general wearing the helmet and, contrary to his usual custom, has not intrusted the work to an artist selected by himself, but has invited competition. Many sketches are now being made, and the painter whose work pleases the kaiser most will receive the order.

WIRELESS TYPESETTING.

Danish Inventor Claims He Can Set 3,000 Words an Hour.

That he has already perfected an invention by which he can set type in an ordinary linotype machine in Paris by wireless waves thrown from London was the surprising statement made at the Hotel Cecil in London the other night by Hans Knudsen, the Danish inventor, famous for his achievements with liquid air, after giving the first public demonstration of long distance wireless photography.

"I shall publicly demonstrate my new wireless typesetting invention within a few weeks," said Mr. Knudsen to a London correspondent of the New York Times. "I have already had the first machine constructed, and it has proved successful, setting 3,000 words an hour at a distance, just as if the operator were working the machine. The time is not far distant when with my invention the London correspondents of the New York newspapers will be able to send their news straight to the printing press through the Marconi operator."

In the course of his demonstration of wireless photography Mr. Knudsen sent photographs of the king and queen of England and the kaiser from one room in the hotel through the wall into another without wires, the pictures proving recognizable.

"I claim I can send pictures wherever Marconi can send messages," said Mr. Knudsen. "Within a short time I shall be sending pictures of criminals and finger prints from England to New York."

"This elevator boy doesn't come up to my expectations," remarked the impatient passenger as he pushed the button for the sixth time.

His Correspondent.

[Original.]

In the olden times, when things were not all ready made by millions, Joseph Sanger stepped into a store where a variety of things were kept on sale. There were embroidered articles for women, fancy articles for household use and lounging articles for men. The latter consisted of dressing gowns, smoking jackets, slippers and such other paraphernalia.

"I'm a bachelor," said the young man—"a lone, lorn bachelor. I am obliged to spend a great deal of time in my room, and I may as well be comfortable. What have you in the line of wearing apparel for such use?"

The shopkeeper squared himself and surveyed his customer with calculation in his eyes. "Yes; I think they will fit you," he said at last. "The very thing—a smoking jacket, cap and slippers, brand new, beautifully embroidered. I got them in only yesterday, but I will sell the lot very cheap." He produced the articles. The young man tried them on, and they fitted him fairly well.

"You say they are new?" he asked. "They look shop worn."

"Such things are made by fine ladies in indigent circumstances, who usually spend a great deal of time on them. I dare say they were a year or more in making. That accounts for their appearance."

Sanger bought the things for a song, took them home and the same evening put them on. As he saw himself in a mirror he thought them very becoming and a great bargain. Lighting a cigar, he sat down in his easy chair, feeling very comfortable. But notwithstanding that he was in fine apparel he was miserable. Who can be happy with nothing but walls to talk to? Thrusting his hands into the pockets of the jacket, he ran one of them against a bit of paper. Withdrawing it, he read:

The maker of this jacket would like to correspond with the purchaser with a view to matrimony.

"Well, now, I like that!" mused Sanger. "That woman has a long head. She knew there were even chances the things would fall into the hands of a bachelor, that the bachelor would wear them in a room all alone and want a wife. My dear, I'll go you."

He wrote a note and mailed it. It came back with postmen's notes scribbled all over it: "Try here. Try there. Try everywhere." Sanger, disappointed, threw it on his dressing case. But the next evening on returning from business it was missing. The maid told him that the postman had asked for it, having found a party to whom it might belong. A few days later a note written on fine paper and bearing a crest was laid on a table in his room. He opened it and read:

Since placing the note in the article you describe prosperity has come to me. Nevertheless I shall be delighted to find a man who has in him the elements of a good husband.

There was no mention of the writer's age. When Sanger replied, which he did at once, he said that his age was twenty-six. Before going any further in the matter he would like to know the lady's age. There was no reply to this, and, fearing that she might be sensitive about her age, he wrote again, giving the old quotation "with loving hearts age makes no difference."

Then came an epistle stating that the age of the lady who had placed the paper in the smoking jacket was forty-two. Sanger was much disappointed and forthwith committed the note to the wastebasket. He was not in need of marrying a fortune and did not propose on any account to marry a woman sixteen years his senior.

Meanwhile a lady acquaintance told him that she wished to introduce him to a young friend of hers. Sanger consented and met an attractive girl of eighteen, with whom he proceeded straightway to fall in love. His passion being reciprocated, an engagement ensued. When he was feeling the happiest a note came from his correspondent stating that she had looked up his record, was satisfied with it and was ready to make his acquaintance. Sanger paid no attention to the note. Presently he received another, stating that if he thought he could trifle in that way with unprotected women he was mistaken. The courts would do her justice.

Sanger was troubled. It appeared that he had been drawn into a trap by a woman for blackmail. She had his letters, though there was no offer of marriage in them, so he might as well write one or two more, trying to fix the matter up. The replies he got puzzled him. They seemed to have been written rather by a young girl than a middle aged woman. Indeed, there was something very unsophisticated in them. He finally determined to meet her and find out just what kind of an enemy he was fencing with.

He made an appointment to meet at a certain spot in the park. As he was about to keep it along came a letter from his fiancee asking him to come to her at that very hour. This was unfortunate, but he resolved to ignore the request. He went to the park.

As he approached the rendezvous whom should he see but his fiancee herself. He halted, but, having been seen by her, he approached. She stood laughing at him. When she had driven him to the verge of anger she explained.

Twenty years agone her mother wrote the note he had found in his dressing gown. His reply had fallen into her hands, and she had been his correspondent. She had secured the introduction and had since been amusing herself by continuing the correspondence. ROSALIE WHITING.

THE COMING OF THE "NAVAL BIRD OF PREY"

THE WAR SHIP AN IDEAL LAUNCHING PLATFORM AND THE SAILOR PECULIARLY FITTED FOR AERONAUTICS

PRACTICABILITY OF THE AEROPLANE FOR OFFENSIVE NAVAL TACTICS AND THE DETECTION OF SUBMARINE DANGERS.

BY REAR ADMIRAL COLBY M. CHESTER, U.S.N.

OUT of this eventful year in the history of aeronautics has come no small amount of material for thought regarding the application of aerial navigation to the military service. In the United States, however, the idea of utilizing airships in warfare seems to have been confined to the army, due doubtless to the fact that aeronautics up to the present time has been practised almost exclusively on land. Yet that the airship has a place and an important one in the naval service has recently been impressed on the experts of several foreign governments, and in speaking of the subject this year before assemblages of naval men in our own country it has been found that the idea is rapidly crystallizing in the United States.

The navy occupies such a distinctive field in military science that the usual treatment of aeronautics does not satisfy the condition imposed by life on board ship. Lack of space in which to house airships and the necessity for large inflating plants almost preclude the use of balloons and make the field of naval aeronautics a very narrow one.

Writers who are competent to discuss the subject from a naval standpoint are few in number, for only a man who has studied the science of aerial navigation and at the same time is familiar with a seafaring life and understands the varying moods of the ocean and its enveloping atmosphere can treat the subject properly. As a rule such of our officers as might take up the study of aerial navigation are employed far away from points on land where experimentation with airships usually goes on. Some of them, at the Jamestown Exposition last summer, however, had the opportunity of witnessing and taking a part in experiments made there and in studying the possibilities of aeronautics for naval purposes. One and all they took a deep interest in the subject and were quite agreed that our navy could not too soon add the science and art of aerial navigation to its list of activities if it is to maintain its standing as a leader in naval science.

FOREIGN NAVIES TAKE IT UP.

Additional impetus is given the idea by the recently disclosed fact that a number of foreign navies have gone into the subject on an elaborate scale. As little of their work has been made public up to this time we do not know what may be expected from their investigations. Brief articles have appeared recently, however, accompanied by illustrations, indicating that captive balloons have actually become a part of the war equipment of some of the Austrian ships. Furthermore, some of the secret history of the Russo-Japanese war, which is gradually coming to light, shows that in the navy as well as in the army captive balloons have been used to good advantage in scouting.

But experimenting with balloons for the naval service seems almost fruitless, excepting as they may be valuable as schools of instruction in aerodynamics. The balloon is as unsuited for the naval conditions of to-day as would be the old fashioned sailing vessel which once graced the service. Almost equally unsuited would be the dirigible balloon. It is not practicable for permanent adoption for use on shipboard, being too cumbersome and unwieldy.

In its relation to present conditions this improved type of balloon may be said to resemble that recent form of naval architecture known as the auxiliary steamer, which once lent prestige to the service, but has also passed away. There is a third class of airship—the aeroplane. Can it not be utilized and adapted to the needs of the navy?

In the workshop of that indefatigable worker and enthusiastic scientist, the Prince of Monaco, a few months ago there was under construction what might be called a "mechanical bird," which was not much larger than its natural prototype, the albatross. The whole mechanism of this wonderful contrivance was such as to appeal particularly to those interested in the needs of the navy, and appeared to contain the secret of the long sought "naval bird of prey." News of its flight has not yet reached us, but one feature of the machine, which cannot be mentioned here, was introduced into our naval architecture many years ago. It gave such good results that we may hope for a speedy solution of the problem of mechanical flight if its use in the construction of the Monaco model is successful.

THE EXPLOSIVE ENGINE.

No one factor in the solution of the problem of aerial navigation has been so important as the introduction of the explosive engine, which is also becoming a very important consideration in the designing of the war ship of the future. It is understood, of course, that the aeroplane is heavier than the air, and cannot be left to the will of the wind as the balloon and the sailing vessel are. It must plough its way through the air, propelled by its own power. Yet the motor must not add so much weight to the machine as to destroy its buoyancy. A light, powerful motor is a necessity for aerial navigation and the efficiency of the aeroplane will be increased in proportion as the weight is lessened. The explosive engine is a great step toward the highest efficiency in this direction.

A similar problem has been met in steamship construction. Formerly the weight of the machinery of a vessel was much greater in proportion to the displacement than it is now; otherwise it would be impossible to procure the high rate of speed of our transoceanic liners without sacrificing too much of their carrying capacity. So in the flying machine the evolution of the engine presages our success in mechanical flight.

In 1894 Sir Hiram Maxim flew an aeroplane weighing five tons a distance of four hundred yards. His engine was driven by steam generated by naphtha and had a weight equivalent to ten pounds per horse power. The aeroplane of Santos-Dumont with which he is making successful flights to-day is motored by explosive engines weighing only two pounds per horse power. It is asserted that airship machinery weighing but little over one pound per horse power is possible of construction. So it will be seen in a few years machinery has been reduced to one-tenth its former weight by the development of the hydrocarbon engine.

The greatest obstacle to be overcome in mechanical flight is the difficulty of providing suitable launching ways to give the airship initial movement. Langley's airship, as we all recognize, was built on the right principles (and his model, in fact, did fly), but it was ruined by a defect in the launching ways. At present mechanical flight is possible only when a movement through the air can be obtained of about a minimum of seventeen miles an hour, depending upon the area of the lifting surface of the machine. This speed can be had on almost any ship at any time. If her engines will not drive the vessel at that rate it is only necessary to steam (or, better, motor) her head into the wind, when a relative speed through the air will be gained equal to her advance plus the rate of the wind. Thus by a simple movement of the helm a ship can be made the launching platform of an aeroplane.

The obstacles of propelling an aeroplane and launching it having been met by the explosive engine and conditions on shipboard, it is essential that provisions be made for keeping the frail machine in good condition. The machine shop aboard every man of war is already as well equipped as most shops on land and would be a first class aeroplane hospital, while the machinists of the crew and the engineers among the officers would constitute an unsurpassed corps of surgeons.

And now for the man to operate the airship. The mechanical advantages of the naval vessel are well supplemented by the training of its men. Aeronautics might well be a study of the seaman, because it is so closely allied to his special calling and requires development in the air along the lines on which he has conquered the water. The winning of the international trophy in 1906 by Lieutenant Lahm and Major Hersey in the balloon races at Paris was largely a "sailor's trick." I refer to their taking advantage of the laws of storm, a factor which enters into every ocean race. Almost any day that presages a coming storm you may see hundreds of vessels at anchor in Hampton Roads waiting for the clouds to disperse and until the southwest quadrant and the storm overlie the Atlantic coast, when, taking advantage of the cyclonic character of the wind, they spread their sails and put to sea with the assurance of a quick and safe trip to their destinations in the south.

This is practically what was done by Lahm and Hersey when they put their airship in the quadrant of southerly winds, low down in the atmospheric sea, instead of seeking the higher altitudes taken by their competitors. By doing this they were carried from Paris to England and reached the "farthest north," winning the cup by a margin of thirty-seven miles. This was old time navigation, and the result showed that it fitted the conditions exactly.

Reference has been made to the kind of airship best adapted to the navy, of the conditions aboard ship that make the use of the aeroplane practicable and of the peculiar fitness of seamen for aeronautics, leaving for last what is really the first consideration—the adaptability of the aeroplane for what we may call "offensive warfare," "the detection of submarine dangers" and "scouting."

It is interesting to speculate upon the possibilities of naval warfare conducted with the aid of an ideally successful airship as a weapon of attack. An aeroplane that could rise to the height of two or three hundred feet would be out of range of the guns of an enemy's fleet, as large guns on shipboard cannot be trained toward the sky at any great angle without the recoil from the discharge doing incalculable damage to the vessel, and the lighter guns have not sufficient range to reach such an object. Such an airship, then, could drop explosives into the fleet of an enemy and do great harm without so much as exposing itself to danger.

The value of the airship in detecting submarine danger is not a matter of speculation. In fact, it would seem to afford a very real protection against submarine vessels and both stationary and floating mines. It is a well known fact that, to a limited altitude, the higher an observer is lifted above the surface the more clearly and to the greater depth can he see into the water. The seaman from time immemorial has used the masthead of the ship as a lookout station from which to pilot the vessel through intricate coral channels, and it has been the pleasure of the sailor in the vicinity of the Bermudas and the famous sea gardens of Nassau to view from that height the wonders of the deep.

An instance of the facility with which submerged objects can be seen from the height attained by an airship was given by Captain T. T. Lovelace, who at the time of the earthquake at Jamaica took an airship to that vicinity for the purpose of studying the effects of the earthquake upon the bottom of the sea. He found that the whole bed of the ocean for a considerable distance from the island was perfectly visible to him and in deep water comparatively small objects were plainly seen. It is believed that had such an appliance as an airship been available at the time of the sinking in San Francisco Bay of the steamship Rio Janeiro, the long and vain search for that lost ship would not have been necessary.

Neither the naval man nor his lay brother needs to be impressed with the advantage to a commander in time of war given by a knowledge of the whereabouts and movements of the enemy. This is not less true upon the water than upon the land. The war balloon of the army has come in response to the recognized demand for thorough scouting. In the navy the aeroplane would fill the needs. Lord Nelson when chasing the vessels of his arch enemy, Napoleon, in the early part of the last century, said that of all things he missed most were scouting vessels, which he properly called the "eyes of the fleet." It is only necessary to read of his campaign to appreciate the truth of this expression and to see of what inestimable value a small, compact aeroplane would have been to him. Undoubtedly had use been made of such an appliance the history of Napoleon's campaign in Egypt would never have been written.

Several of the ships of the Vladivostok squadron which wrought such havoc among Japanese transports and merchantmen during the late war between Japan and Russia had installed on their decks captive balloons, with which the ships were able to make more than one examination of the coast of Nippon without themselves being seen. Much of interest of this phase of war has been learned this last summer from one of the Russian officers who took part in it, who gave our officers much valuable information as to the uses of the captive balloon.

It appears that the Russian vessels kept about thirty miles off the coast of Japan, and from it re they made many extremely successful scouting expeditions. Such of the Japanese ships of the smaller kind which may have been near enough to have seen the balloon in its flight took no alarm from the innocent looking black dot against the sky, since no Russian war ship appeared upon the horizon to threaten their safety.

Globe Trotter and Soldier of Fortune Arrested Here—Homeless and Old, He Tramps.

The old walls at the city prison have imprisoned many interesting characters, but one man that was arrested the other night, picked up on the streets and slated as a "drunk" has probably had as many unusual and exciting experiences as any man that ever had the big barred door shut on him.

Jimmie Caldwell, the prisoner, was a common tramp, was educated at one of the biggest universities in the country, and excellent blood flows in his veins. But after his mother died he left home. He has never told any one why, and he never mentions it. When asked where he is from he may answer that he has none, or he may [illegible] France in Africa.

In turn he has been a lecturer and he was with Henry M. Stanley when he explored the wilds of Africa. He has visited Russia, Japan, India, China, Turkey and the Philippines.—no country has escaped his gaze. He lives now in the past, for the present is dreary to him and the future fails to interest him.

Jimmie has left town. He doesn't know where he is going, but he doesn't care, and so day after day he keeps up his ceaseless traveling, homeless and alone. The world, once so interesting to him, fails to amuse him now. He is getting old, and he may die soon, but he says death is welcome, and he doesn't care when its icy hand is laid on him.

SUNDAYS IN MAY

Three Special Meetings at Saylor Hall Will End a Most Successful Season.

Tomorrow afternoon will be given the first of a series of three special meetings which will close the Sunday afternoon programs at the Y. M. C. A.

The subjects to be presented at these meetings are "Labor, Religion and Politics." Next Sunday will be a meeting for the consideration of the laboring man and his interests. The speakers will be Hon. John M. Morgan, state inspector of shops from Columbus, and Rev. F. A. Cosgrove of the First Presbyterian church. Mr. Morgan's subject is "The Moral Value of Physical Toil." Mr. Morgan has gone the rounds of a laboring man's experience and is a speaker of ability. Rev. Mr. Cosgrove will discuss the subject, "How Can the Laboring Man and the Church Get Closer Together?" Special music is being prepared by the orchestra and male quartet.

Through the Trades Council all working men and organized labor bodies are especially invited. Meeting begins at 3 o'clock.

ADVOCATE'S MARKET REPORT.

One of the many good feniures that the Advocate offers to its readers is the fullness and correctness of the daily market report. As Newark and vicinity is a large producer of grain and meat and as our industries for manufacturing the same into utilities are continually growing, the value of our market report is certainly appreciated by the farmer and the manufacturer.

The grain and cattle market of the primary points is always correctly given in each issue of this paper, and is furnished to us at the close of the day's trading by Mr Fred Sinsabaugh, the enterprising broker of West Main street. That this paper furnishes the full market including the closing prices is mentioned because we wish to point that many times the evening papers, published elsewhere often go to press before the finish of the day's trading, consequently they are only able to print part of the market, but more often leave out the date and print the market of the previous day.

NEW LAWS FOR OHIO

Review of Work Accomplished at the Legislative Session---Eight Millions Appropriated. Two Investigations Financed.

During the session of the legislature some very important legislation was enacted. Of the 685 bills originating in the house 188 were passed, and of the 334 bills originating in the senate 96 were passed. The resolution to abolish the uniform rule of taxation was the only constitutional amendment adopted at this session, and it will be submitted to the voters at the November election this year along with two amendments adopted at the session two years ago. The initiative and referendum resolution was finally lost through a deadlock of the conference committee on amendments made by the house after the resolution was adopted by the senate where it originated. The appropriations for all purposes will amount to about $8,000,000 in round numbers, which includes $35,000 for each of the Cincinnati and Cleveland investigations.

Below is given a brief summary of the most important laws enacted:

S. B. 283. Ward—Empowering governor to pardon, commute or suspend sentence temporarily of women committed to penitentiary when enciente.

S. B. 344. Rathburn—To forbid drinking intoxicating liquors aboard engine or car or train of steam or electric railways except in dining or buffet car. Penalty $5 to $100.

H. B. 748. Adler—Regulates establishment, maintenance and inspection of maternity hospitals, under licenses granted by state board of health. Penalty not more than $300 fine, one year imprisonment, or both.

S. B. 293. Gayman—To forbid stenographers disclosing information without consent of employer, except on witness stand in court. Penalty $25 to $500 fine and imprisonment not to exceed six months, or both.

H. B. 727. Crawford—To prohibit employment of men to work alone in mines generating fire damp or gas who have not had at least one year of experience at mining. Penalty $25 to $200 fine.

H. B. 913. Paine—Provides for commission of five to be appointed by the governor to care for and contral Fort Meigs memorial grounds.

Forbids Campaign Contributions.

H. B. 719. Hunt—To forbid contributions to political parties by corporations, which shall file affidavit to that effect in annual reports to secretary of state. Penalty $50 to $500 for the corporation, and persons responsible for such violation subject to not more than $2000 fine and imprisonment not exceeding one year. Immunity given for persons testifying to violations of this act.

H. B. 673. Metzger—Relates to liability of railway corporations for damages sustained by employes. Abolishes assumed risk by remaining in service after knowledge of defect in locomotives, cars, tracks, hand-cars or machinery. Contributory negligence shall be no bar to recovery where negligence of employer was greater. All questions of negligence shall be for the jury.

H. B. 806. Frizell—Fixing compensation of assessors of personal property at $3 per day.

H. B. 714. Reynolds of Cuyahoga—Regulating employment of child labor. ## HAMBURG MAN'S INVENTION A BOON TO SEASICK PEOPLE

Hamburg, May 9. — Herr Otto Schlick, a Hamburg shipbuilding engineer and manager of the German-Lloyd has, after lengthy experiments, been able to adapt the gyroscope to a steamship with remarkable results in the direction of prevention of rolling in a seaway. Herr Schlick, after a study of the principles of the gyroscope, came to the conclusion that the apparatus, if firmly built into the hull of a ship, would considerably decrease the rolling motion so disagreeable to people inclining to seasickness.

TO DYNAMITE A PANTHER.

Expert Hunter Hired to Kill Beast That Frightens Entire Town.

Joe Dignard, famous hunter and guide, has been hired to hunt a large panther that took up its abode in the woods about Madrid, Me., late last fall and has frightened the community. Church socials and other forms of evening entertainments have been canceled because the people dare not venture from their homes after dark.

Several persons have been attacked by the animal and barely escaped with their lives. The panther is described as being a female with a body about four feet long and standing two feet and a half high. At night she prowls about the farm buildings seeking prey.

A party of hunters recently tracked the animal to a large cave, but none dared remain after dark for the panther to appear. Dignard, who is an expert rifle shot, is armed with an automatic rifle, large revolver and hunting knife and has several sticks of dynamite with which to blow up the cave and force the animal to a fight in the open.

Reminiscences of Newark Musicians

BY JOSEPH SIMPSON.

"I knew him, Horatio; a fellow of [illegible] was the greatest joker, of infinite jest."

Sixty years ago I lived in the village of Somerset, the town of Phil Sheridan fame. I was a small boy then. I am prone to live over again those days, thinking of the fun of sports with the boys, sledding down the long hills in the winter and in the summer wandering in search of the cool mint-bordered springs, swimming holes, lone mulberry trees or shady woods where grew ginsengs, crow's feet, snake root, wild ginger, and the deceitful "Ingin" turnip places and things that will never lose their endearments to me and become stronger as I age.

In the village, almost directly across the street from where I lived in a small shop, worked a young man and his father making cigars. The son was a flute player, above the average then, and to me his low tones were entrancing, "like voices of angels in Paradise". Occasionally he would leave off his work, and wash his hands in preparation for a season of practice, while I observing would shyly slip across the way and sit on his door step to feast upon the [illegible] low murmurs that he breathed [illegible] in the execution of "Home, Sweet Home," "Bonnie Doon," and other kindred airs so well adapted to the flute. It was my daily enjoyment when not at school or playing hooky. Often to my sorrow he would suddenly cease playing and resume the manufacture of the fragrant stogy—three for a cent.

Once he told me that General Washington was a flute player and even a great man in Germany, called Frederick the Great, played the flute very well.

Is it a wonder, then, that in after years while living in Newark, I was easily persuaded to go to the Reverend Father Bender, the priest of the parish on Granville street, asking for instruction on this favorite instrument? I was 17 then. His Reverence met me kindly and after a short talk, advised me to procure a flute and said he would instruct me, after satisfying himself that I could learn. He said every person could not learn to play the flute well. The Reverend Father was a fine player and I was happy in the thought that he was to teach me. After getting fairly started he seemed pleased to compliment me upon my work after each lesson and I felt encouraged and was grateful. After a while he thought to test my ability as a singer and in consequence I joined his choir and sang tenor with a baritone voice, a somewhat difficult proposition. He explained that he was short on tenors. I continued to progress. He organized a male quartet. I was made first tenor—the top line (F) was my limit. D. T. Coffman was second tenor, John Holden first bass, J. C. Wehrle second bass. We sang from a book published by the Continental Vocalists, a noted organization of that period. We dispensed our wares chiefly by moonlight under the latticed windows of our cherished maiden friends. On one occasion in the west end (Lockport), we ran into a crowd of promenaders in couples, and recognized one young lady who was to have listened to our songs, most guiltily and socially ensconced with a rival, under the same shawl. It was chilly. At a hint by one of our artists more interested than the others, we turned on our heels and in deep cogitation went lumbering down the tow path for town. No serenades for Lockport that night. Lockport was some time slightingly called the City of Peth.

One day His Reverence invited me to join his brass band, a new organization. I accepted. It was the Newark Saxhorn Band. The late Colonel J. C. Wehrle was leader. The late John Moser also belonged. I was instructed with the second leading instrument. It was not long till I could lead and play the first part fairly well when our leader was absent.

It is now 53 years since, and all the boys that belonged to that band have passed out of existence save two. genial John McCarthy who is often seen on the streets of Newark, and myself.

I was told a few years ago that the Reverend Father conducts a past rate in Pueblo, Colorado, and his interest in music has not abated. He was jolly and had a fund of wit and enjoyed snuff. At Christmas and Easter we always played and sang at his services, where all were pleased to take part, after which we were royally treated. Before leaving the organ loft word was sent to us to stop in his library and be refreshed. We would invariably find a sumptuous lunch of turkey and coffee, followed by cigars to be smoked on our way home.

Every band has one or two jesters; the Two Johns—Moser and McCarthy—were our fun makers, and I can not but think that without them we would have been a dull crowd. Once in Mt. Vernon our band and the Vernon band met socially, and during the meeting much humor was indulged in. The jesters were early to get their heads together and it was real fun when they began. It was hard to [illegible] P. Ward was the greatest joker, [illegible] position was as follows:

"I move," said the Vernon man, addressing those present, "that a leather medal be struck for Mr. Moser with a gentleman on one side and a jackass on the other."

Moser quickly retorted: "And we'll have the gentleman from Mt. Vernon photographed for the jackass side!"

The Vernon artist, feeling worsted took refuge in the remark that "every band has its d— d fool, and I'll leave it to the crowd to say which is the biggest Moser or myself."

Did any person in Licking county ever hear of the bigelow practicing on a brass instrument? I feel sure he never spent one hour of his numerous life in perfecting himself in this accomplishment. Yet at times he took part in playing during fair time—not professional but "just to mix up" as Joe Kessler would say. He was secretary of the Licking County Agricultural Society and when the rush of business was over in the afternoons the joint Isaac would make an appearance in the vicinity of the racing ring. Everybody knew him, and he would be met with jovial salutations from all quarters. Finally entering the ring he would climb up into the band stand, situated on the old eagle mound, and would be joyfully greeted by the members of the band. Finally, asking what we were going to play next, the crowd below watching and commenting on his every movement and predicting fun from his actions, he would pick up a band book, hurriedly turn over the leaves and point to "Number 'leven," a favorite air. With much preliminary preparation, and striking an attitude with a horn in hand, he would give the signal, "One, two, three," and a lively air would follow. With shrugged shoulders, puffed cheeks, and distorted face, his fingers flying over the keys of his instrument, accompanied by various jerks and gyrations, Isaac would sail in in great form, to the delectation of the admiring crowds, but in reality not producing a sound. He would halt and begin industriously turning his leaves again, backward and forward, and with apparent anger would reach over and point out a supposed error a player had made. Recovering he would sail in again, finally delivering himself of a succession of ear splitting blasts that threatened the overhanging roof, and "Number 'leven" ceased amid great applause from his admirers, Isaac acknowledging with excessive wavings and bowings. With book in hand he would circulate among the band boys, pointing out and making suggestions for their improvement, after which he would triumphantly join his admirers below, receiving hearty hand shakes and congratulations.

Isaac always claimed a membership in the band. I called while visiting in Newark in January and found him lying sick, but cheerful, and with the merry gleam in his eye of long ago, but grayer. I have in my possession a musical sketch, including staff, clef, notes and words, written by him and sent me from Marion. It is recollections of a German band that existed in Newark 70 years ago. His humorous rendition of this will be remembered by some of the older citizens still living in Newark.

Isaac also played the violin, and at occasional fetes and home entertainments would take part in the execution of old time airs on this grand instrument.

DEEDS, NOT WORDS.

Newark People Have Absolute Proof of Deeds at Home.

It's not words, but deeds that prove true merit.

The deeds of Doan's Kidney Pills,
For Newark kidney sufferers,
Have made their local reputation.

Proof lies in the testimony of Newark people who have been cured to stay cured.

Charles W. Manville, residing at 7 Lansing Block, Newark, Ohio, says: "I had a severe attack of grippe which weakened my kidneys and as a result I suffered from pains in my back and a disordered condition of my kidney secretions. There was a constant dull aching in my back and through my loins, accompanied by sharp shooting twinges which annoyed me both day and night. I tried numerous remedies but obtained only temporary relief and was gradually becoming run down in health. Hearing of Doan's Kidney Pills I procured a box at Crayton's drug store, began using them and the result was a complete cure." (From statement given Nov. 10, 1904.)

CONFIRMED PROOF.

On Nov. 26, 1907, Mr. Manville said: "I am pleased to reiterate my former testimonial in favor of Doan's Kidney Pills, as the results I obtained from their use have proven permanent. Doan's Kidney Pills acted so promptly in my case that I have the greatest confidence in them."

MISS CHARLOTTE LUND

Paris, May 9—Miss Charlotte Lund of Oswego, who has been studying for the last three years with M. Jean de Reszke, made a successful debut and was hailed by the American colony as a promising new American soprano.

A grandniece of Ole Bull, a famous violinist, Miss Lund has a hereditary basis for her talent. She always had leanings toward a musical career and played the organ in a church in Oswego, her native place.

Miss Lund was struck with the desire to sing in grand opera, and she went to Paris two years ago to study with M. Jean de Reszke. She made rapid progress and gave several concerts in European capitals—in London and Brussels and Berlin.

The Victorious Pinkwinks.

BY MAUD WALKER.

The Pinkwinks were one family. The Nogwogs another family. Both families lived in the same wood and each had a fine cave. And many other families like the Pinkwinks and the Nogwogs lived in the wood near to the Pinkwinks and the Nogwogs. And all were very funny little folk, not a bit like the people of today. The Pinkwinks had pink eyes that perpetually winked, even when their owners were asleep. And the Pinkwinks always ran, but never walked. They dressed in skins of wild animals and wore great feather headdresses made from the plumage of gaily colored birds. They occupied a high place in the society of the wood, and only one other family could vie with them in importance. And that was the Nogwogs family.

The Nogwogs were all red-haired and purple skinned. The color of their complexion was a source of great pride to them, for folk of purple skin had always ruled the people about them. So had this branch of the Nogwogs ruled the people of their wood till the Pinkwinks had come into their midst, and then a division of their power had come about. And as a natural consequence there was enmity existing between the two most powerful families of the wood. The Nogwogs were a plainer folk in the matter of dress than were the Pinkwinks. Their garb consisted of unadorned wolfskins, and their hair alone served to cover their heads. They looked with some contempt on the gay attire of the Pinkwinks. Also the Nogwogs were quieter and slower folk, never moving out of a deliberate walk.

The wood folk were divided in their loyalty to the Pinkwinks and the Nogwogs, about half of the population following the former and the other half remaining loyal to the latter. Thus, the division being equal, there had never been open hostilities between the two ruling and rival families.

But one day the head of the Nogwogs conceived the idea of running the Pinkwinks out of the wood, thus regaining the undivided power over the wood folk that he had enjoyed prior to the advent of the Pinkwinks. So, calling together his chosen followers, the mighty Nogwog divulged his plan. And as his loyal followers never thought for one minute of disputing him they acquiesced as one man, declaring that they were ready to do their chieftain's bidding.

"Get ye to your lizards' backs and ride ye round the wood and warn each and every Pinkwink that he and his sympathizers must quit this part of the world, and if they parley over the order come ye back to me and we will prepare for war. I have had quite enough of this Pinkwinkian presumption." So spake the head of the Nogwogs. And quickly did his men obey his order. To their caves they hastened and brought forth their swiftest lizards, saddled them and were off, going about the wood in most formidable style and issuing their chieftain's order.

Now, the Pinkwinks were not a quarrelsome people. They were life-loving and merry. And the hostilities shown them by the Nogwogs' messengers made their pink eyes wink twice as fast as was their custom.

"What, your chief says for us to quit our homes?" asked the oldest male Pinkwink, stopping in his sport of diving in a brook. "Why, my kind Nogwogian friend, don't you know that we have the same right to live here as you? And although we are not fighters—well, we'll hold our own. Take that answer to your chief."

And then, his merriment banished for the day, the head Pinkwink hurried to his cave and summoned all his strongest followers. Then he made known to them the latest news of the day—the order from the chieftain, the Boss Nogwog, for them to quit the wood, abandon their comfortable homes to their enemies, and never more to return.

"Ah, and that's the command of the purple-complexioned Nogwog, is it?" The question was asked by the son of the head Pinkwink, a splendid youth of brave aspect and haughty air. "Well, we refuse to obey. That's quite enough for us to say. I for one am quite happy in our present abode and refuse to give it up for any Nogwog or bunch of Nogwogs."

Then, before his father could say a word, the youth—by name Spanker—had left his father's cave and was going off at a run across the clearing in the forest.

"Whither goes my son?" asked the elder Pinkwink. "I rely upon him for advice in this matter. He has youth and ideas: I am old and afraid to venture as far as a younger man would do."

"Be calm and listen, great Pinkwink," ventured one of the chosen men who had assembled at Pinkwink's bidding. "I have a pretty story to tell you. But you must not display anger, nor chide thy son, for young hearts will roam where they list, regardless of the elder's wishes and commands. Shall I speak on?"

"I shall pay strictest attention, and respect thy confidence—whatever its nature may be," replied the head Pinkwink. And he winked very, very fast, for he was much excited and worried over the business in hand.

"Well, my friend and leader, hear this: Your beloved son, Spanker, is in love with the beautiful daughter of the Chieftain Nogwogs. I have seen them holding secret converse together at the door to her cave when the moon was waning. I heard them make vows of eternal love, and one of the maiden's hand-maids told my daughter that her mistress was preparing to elope with a gay young knight, who would take her to the finest and gayest cave in the wood, where she should be surrounded by all that a bride's heart could wish for."

To the great surprise of his followers, the elder Pinkwink did not show anger. Indeed, a smile crossed his funny little, old features, and his pink eyes sparkled with approval of the story he had heard. "Very well," he said. "Let the wedding take place as soon as possible—that is, as soon as the young folks desire it to be. We must give the bride the warmest welcome that can be shown to the daughter of a great house, even though the blood of my enemy flows in her veins. And, see ye not the outcome? Why, our enemy holds his daughter most dear. Once she is allied by marriage to his hated rival's son peace will reign. And then all will be happiness in this beautiful wood."

"Then I shall away and tell your son Spanker of your willingness for him to wed a Nogwog," said the man who had divulged the young Pinkwink's secret.

"Aye, and tell him I'm not only willing, but most anxious for this union," said the elder Pinkwink. Then he bade his trusty men to disperse, and to find his son and bear to him his father's message.

But just as they were about to depart from the cave of their chief a mighty shout arose from the throats of at least 50 men who had surrounded the cave of the head of the Pinkwinks. Going to the door, and thrusting aside the animal skin which hung over it to shut out the view of the outsiders, the head Pinkwink saw, to his surprise, his enemy, the Chieftain Nogwogs, and his strong body guard.

"Surrender!" cried the Chieftain Nogwogs. "I have come to take you prisoners. This wood belongs by rights to the Nogwogs, and as a descendant of that family I shall brook no division of my rights."

"And as a descendant of the royal family of Pinkwinks I refuse to give up that which is mine. I have my home here and all my blood is with me. I have as many followers as you and I shall hold my own, be the consequences what they may." So spake the head of the Pinkwinks, blinking and winking excitedly as he defied his enemy.

While this conversation was taking place between the heads of the Nogwogs and the Pinkwinks, the trusty messenger of the latter had crept from a secret side opening in the cave and had gone full speed in pursuit of his master's son, Spanker. He made no mistake in supposing that the young man had gone to court his lady love, and found him at the door of his young mistress' cave. Going to him without a moment's delay he repeated the message sent by the elder Pinkwink, furthermore telling of the hostile move of the Nogwogs against the Pinkwinks.

And inside the cave listened the love-lorn Nogwogs maiden. Coming bravely to the door she said to her ardent lover: "I shall go to your father's cave with you, hand in hand. We shall have your priest—if he be there—join us in wedlock at once. Then shall my father make amends to your father for this outrage."

"Ah, I have a better plan," cried the messenger of the elder Pinkwink. "Let me run and fetch the priest and another witness and have the ceremony take place here in your own cave. Then your father cannot say that your gallant Spanker coerced you into leaving your cave to become his bride under such strenuous and exciting conditions."

"You speak with wisdom," declared Spanker, grasping the hand of his father's trusty messenger. "Go ye and fetch the priest and a second witness."

Half an hour later, and just as the Chieftain Nogwogs was giving the order to his men to storm his enemy's cave, he saw, to his amazement, the daughter of his heart coming toward him leaning on the arm of Spanker, eldest son of the head Pinkwinks. For a moment he was too full of wrath to speak; then he commanded, in a raging voice: "Speak out, maiden! What does this unseemly conduct on your part mean?"

"That I am on the arm of my dearly beloved husband and knight, Spanker, of the Pinkwinks," replied the blushing bride, calmly, advancing to the spot where her father raged and swore, and declared that he would have the blood of every Pinkwink but what he would have revenge for this most hateful hour.

"Then you take my blood, too," said his daughter, holding up her head and looking defiance at her father. "You have provoked this quarrel because you are jealous of your rival. As the wood is plenty large to accommodate both Nogwogs and Pinkwinks, I have seen fit to join the families together in a bond of love. But if you persist in this hostility I shall call you my enemy. I go to the home of my husband. If you would speak further with me send a messenger of peace to my new abode." And with these words the bride of Spanker, eldest son of the head of the Pinkwinks, ran quickly into the Pinkwinks' cave, her young husband by her side.

The Chieftain Nogwog fumed and raged till he quite wore himself out, but he dared not storm the cave of his rival for fear that he might injure one hair on the head of his adored daughter. Then, after exhausting himself, he sent his followers to their home and he went meekly to the door of the Pinkwink's cave, knocking softly on the rock which half concealed the entrance.

The animal skin was lifted by a white, slender hand and Nogwogs' daughter asked in loving tones: "Do you wish to come to the wedding feast, which is in preparation, father mine?"

And what could the father do? True, he was a proud and defiant Nogwog; but everything save the love for his child must now give way. "Not only do I wish to come to the wedding feast, daughter of my heart," said the Chieftain Nogwogs, "but I wish to hold a friendly consultation with your husband's father. We are both old men now, and may as well give over our places to you and the gallant Spanker."

"Ah, and I agree with you, friend Nogwogs," said the elder Pinkwinks, winking very fast and smiling very happily. "And now let us bless our children, for this day they have banished rivalry and conflict and put love in their place. Happy will the families of Nogwogs and Pinkwinks be forever after this day."

And peace dwelt in the wood ever after that so long as the Pinkwinks and the Nogwogs ruled. And that was a thousand years or more.

Helpful Hints for Our Young Artists.

LESSON NO. 2—HOW TO DRAW A RABBIT.

Something About Good St. Patrick

It is difficult to say just where St. Patrick was born, for so many countries lay claim to the honor of his birth. But the 17th of March is a day dedicated to the Good Saint Patrick, and all over the civilized world this day is kept sacred. Some historians have traced the good saint from Wales through Scotland to Ireland. But of one thing we are quite sure, and that is that Ireland was the field of his noble activities.

When St. Patrick was in his sixteenth year he was stolen by pirates. The pirates sold him into captivity in Ireland, and for several years he was a slave in County Antrim. When in his twenty-third year he made his escape from Ireland, going to Rome, where he studied for the priesthood. After working in the capacity of a priest for some time he was made a bishop, then Pope Celestine sent him to Ireland as a missionary to christianize the people.

But the benighted people of Ireland were in the power of priests called Druids, and these priests practiced upon the credulous many superstitions, holding their victims in their power. Owing to this St. Patrick found it very difficult to get followers, and legend tells us that in order to make his strength felt he was obliged "to curse the fertile soil and make it turn to bogs; to curse the rivers so that no fish could live in them; to curse the kettles so that no fires could make them boil, and, finally, to curse the Druids till the earth opened up and swallowed them."

St. Patrick was born about the year 372, and died on the 17th of March, 493. Perhaps his good work was the means of prolonging his life to so ripe an age. However that may be, he became endeared in the hearts of the Irish people, and is as dear to them today as when he first delivered them from the evil teachings of the Druids.

St. Patrick is also credited with having banished the toads and snakes from the Emerald Isle.

"Speak out, maiden! What does this unseemly conduct on your part mean?"

COUNTRY MAIDS.

Dear little maids from every land;
Dear little maids on every hand;
Some from France, in caps so gay,
Others from Russia, far away.

Some from Holland, in shoes of wood;
And others, that cannot be understood,
From Italy, Germany and China, too,
The latter in silk kimono and queue.

Some from Spain, with chatter light,
And from the frozen land of night;
From Sunny Japan, with flowers galore,
And many from dear America's shore.

And some from England, 'cross the sea,
And others from quaint old Normandy;
From Erin's Isle, with flaxen curls,
Come many dear little Irish girls.

They fill the world with their presence sweet,
As they frolic about on dancing feet;
Dear little maids from every land;
Dear little maids on every hand.

THAT POT OF GOLD AT THE END OF THE RAINBOW. BY WILLIAM WALLACE, JR.

Gracie and Neddie had been reading a most thrilling story. It was of a mysterious pot of gold at the end of the rainbow. And it said that whoever succeeded in reaching the end of the rainbow before it faded away should possess the rich treasure, which amounted to more than a king's ransom.

"Why, just think of it, sister," said Neddie, his eyes wide with wonder. "You and I might have it—the pot of gold—could we reach the end of the rainbow before it fades from the sky."

"Well, Brother, the very next time there is a rainbow we'll go after the pot of gold. Wouldn't it be fine to have all the money one could spend? I'd buy that toy shop down at the corner, and I'd also have the little candy store that's near to the schoolhouse. Oh, I'd buy ever so many things, I would." And Gracie was all eager anticipation, as she planned on procuring the mysterious treasure at the end of the rainbow, a treasure which seemed to have passed the notice of people in general; else why didn't someone go and get it?

"Well, Sis, if you and I ever do get that pot of gold I'll buy a pony and saddle and a goat and a——"

"Children, supper is ready," called their mamma's voice. And in the enjoyment of eating their nice mush and milk Gracie and Neddie forgot about the rainbow and the pot of gold.

And they did not think of the story again for sometime. But it was recalled to their mind one day, as they were on their way home from school, by the sight of a dark cloud rising in the west.

"Oh, it's going to rain," declared Gracie. "And then will come the rainbow. Mercy me! I wonder if we shall be able to go in search of the rainbow?"

"Why not?" asked Neddie. "A pot of gold is well worth going over into old Mr. Smith's big meadow for. And you know that the end of the rainbow always rests in that place. Why, it can't be more than a mile over to the very spot where the rainbow's end rests on the earth. I've seen it so many times, I have. And if I had known that a pot of gold was there I'd have gone after it, so I would. It's a wonder that Bob Smith hasn't got it, for their house is close to the meadow."

"Maybe he never heard about the pot of gold," suggested Gracie.

"Well, we'll never tell him," said shrewd Neddie. "And we'll never tell anyone, for then somebody would get ahead of us and get the pot of gold."

"Just see how fast that cloud is rising!" exclaimed Gracie. "Isn't it a pity that the rainbow doesn't come before the rain instead of after it? If it did we'd start right now to the meadow of old Mr. Smith's and get the pot of gold and carry it home with us. Wouldn't mamma and papa be surprised?"

"Say, Sister," said Neddie meditatively, "suppose we go to the meadow right now and be there when the rainbow comes. If we wait till after the rain we may not get there before the rainbow fades from the sky. And I fancy that is the reason why no one has ever got the pot of gold; everyone waits till after the rain, and then they can't reach the end of the rainbow before it has faded from sight."

"Maybe that's so," acquiesced Gracie. "But what would mamma do if we were not to reach home at the usual time? She'd get awfully worried and start out to hunt for us."

"You forget that mamma was going this afternoon to grandmamma's," said Neddie. "And she said she might not get home till after supper. So we can go to the meadow and wait for the rainbow, and when we go home carry the pot of gold along with us. We'll reach home about the same time that mamma gets there."

But Gracie needed much urging before she could be induced to go to the pasture with Neddie.

"Where will we stay while it is raining?" she asked of her brother.

"Why, we could sit under the edge of one of those big straw stacks that are in the meadow," Neddie told her.

"But we'd get cold," argued Gracie.

"Nope, not if we'd dig a little cave into the side of the haystack," explained Neddie. "And being there so close to the place where the end of the rainbow rests on the ground would be all in our favor. The very minute that it—the rainbow—appears we'll start for its end. We couldn't miss getting the pot of gold, you see."

So he persuaded his sister to go with him to old Mr. Smith's meadow to wait for the rainbow. And they set off at once, turning their faces away from home and going at a quick walk towards the country.

They climbed over a tall fence and walked through last year's wheat stubble. They had gone some distance before the cloud threatened to let its contents loose. Then a few flying flakes of snow fell.

"What, is it going to snow instead of rain?" asked Gracie, her disappointment keen.

"Oh, it'll rain all right," declared Neddie. "See that cloud? Well, that's a rain cloud—not a snow cloud. It's so cold that the first few drops of rain will freeze as they fall. But as soon as they begin to come down faster they'll turn to rain."

"And I'm almost freezing," declared Gracie. "Let's hurry to the old straw stack and crawl into it."

They did as Gracie wished and soon had dug a little tunnel into the southern side of the straw stack. Into this secure cave they crept and waited patiently for the longed-for rain.

But Neddie's prediction was not fulfilled. The snowflakes fell faster and faster, becoming larger as they covered the ground. Still, Neddie had hopes, and tried to infuse them into his sister's mind. But Gracie was becoming afraid as the evening darkened and the atmosphere grew colder. After waiting for what seemed to her a long, long time, she said:

"Brother, let's go home and wait for summer time. It'll be sure to rain then, and we'll have an easier time getting to the end of the rainbow."

"Now, ain't that just like a girl?" asked Neddie. "Why, you haven't a bit of nerve."

But after another half hour had passed and the snow was still coming down very fast, spreading a white blanket over everything, even Neddie's nerve began to grow less. He didn't like giving up, but he feared he would be obliged to do so. To Gracie's urging he at last said:

"All right, Sis, if you won't stay any longer I'll go home with you. But remember this, I came to get the pot of gold, and if I had my way I'd stay and get it, too."

"But how's there to be a rainbow?" asked Gracie, impatiently. "Who ever saw one after a snowstorm, anyway? You're crazy, Brother, to want to stay when it isn't raining, and isn't going to, either."

"All right," said Neddie, crawling out of the tunnel. But just as he did so he darted in again, whispering hoarsely to Gracie:

"There's a wild bull in the pasture. How will we ever get away from here?"

At this bit of dreadful news Gracie's face paled and she began to cry. "Oh, if only I was at home! If I was with dear mamma I wouldn't care about the pot of gold. Any old person that wants it may have it. I'll never, never run away to this pasture again after anything, not even a dozen pots of gold."

Neddie made no reply, for he wouldn't admit that he felt just as his sister did in the matter. But every minute or so he would cautiously peep from the tunnel to see whether or not the "wild bull" was still keeping near. To his horror he could see the formidable animal walking leisurely about in the fast-falling snow, seemingly very contented to stay within a few feet of the straw stack.

"Is he still here?" asked Gracie in a whisper.

"Yep, but I think he'll be going soon," said Neddie, not believing his own words. He only wished to lessen his little sister's fears.

And then something happened. Both children, to their delight, heard a man whistling. And the whistler was approaching their cave, too. Neddie put his head out from the hole in the straw stack's side and called:

"Hello, mister. Will you please come and help us to get out of this pasture?"

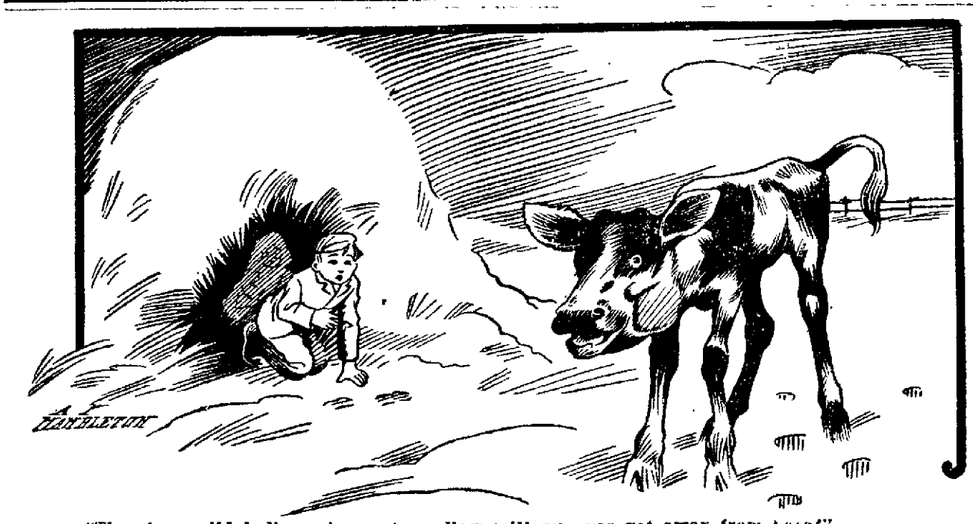
In another minute a jolly faced man was peering into the cave at the two little ones. "Why, upon my soul, what are you doing inside that straw stack? Are you fairies?"

"Nope, we're plain children," explained Neddie. "And we are afraid to come out on account of that wild bull that's near the straw stack."

"Wild bull! Ha, ha, ha!" And the man straightened up and roared with laughter. "Why, kid, that's just a little calf that has gotten out of its stable and wandered off into the meadow. I'm after it now to drive it home, it's going to be a cold night for the middle of March, and all the live stock must be under shelter. But come out; you needn't be afraid of this 'wild bull.' Ha, ha, ha!"

Five minutes later Neddie and Gracie were running homeward as fast as they could go. And just as they turned into the big road leading to town who should come along in a carriage but their own mamma. She was returning from her mother's home, and came along just in time to take her little ones up beside her in the snug-covered carriage with the fur rug.

And as they rode homeward Gracie and Neddie told her of their experience hunting the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow, a rainbow that did not materialise that day.



"There's a wild bull in the pasture. How will we ever get away from here?"

Billy the Buzzer.

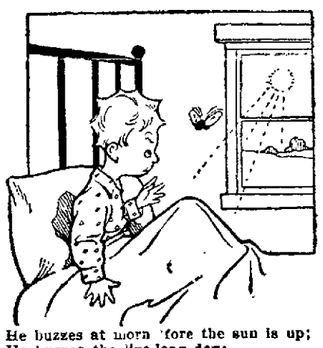
Billy Blue-Bottle, buzzing so loud,
Is a sign that Spring is here;
He buzzes against the window pane,
And he buzzes around your ear.



He buzzes at morn 'fore the sun is up;
He buzzes the live-long day;
He buzzes about you while you work,
And he buzzes while you play.

Oh, he is the buzziest buzzer of buzz,
Is this old Blue-Bottle fly;
And you really cannot get rid of him,
No matter how much you try.

CIRCUS EMPLOYE

Falls From Street Car and Receives Serious Injuries—Taken to the Newark Sanitarium.

Lawrence Monroe of Butte, Montana, driver of an eight-horse team for the Hagenbeck-Wallace show, is lying at the Newark Sanitarium, suffering from serious injuries sustained by falling from a street car at a late hour Friday night. Monroe had been down street and was returning to the show grounds when he claims he was knocked from a street car at the corner of Church and Eleventh street. He was found in an unconscious condition about 12 o'clock and was taken to the Sanitarium in Bowers & McClement's ambulance. He is a Spanish-American war veteran. He sustained some injuries about the back, stomach, head and face. Drs. Barnes and Stifel attended him.

PROWLER

ANNOYS EAST NEWARK RESIDENTS BY SNEAKING ABOUT HOUSES

"Jack the Peeper" Who Gets Busy on Madison Avenue, May Get a Warm Reception.

"If the parties who have been annoying my daughter and myself from time to time during the past few weeks by peeping into our windows and creeping on them at all hours of the night and morning, do not stop it and are caught, they may expect a little shower of lead." This remark was made by Mrs. Sue Garber of West Madison avenue, East Newark, Saturday morning.

The family has been repeatedly annoyed by the same person, whom they suspect, who has been making a custom of tramping their flower beds and prowling about their home at nights. Friday morning, as a neighbor informed Mrs. Garber, he saw and recognized a person who was peeping through the windows of the Garber home as early as 4:30. The neighbor, however, refused to tell who the party was.

Other East Newark residents have been annoyed recently in a similar manner and are now preparing to give the prowler a welcome not altogether agreeable, and Mrs. Garber declares that if she can see the man prowling about her home again she will shoot him.

DRINKING MEN NOT WANTED.

The above sign is now seen in many shops and offices in this city, because drinking men are unreliable.

Competition is too keen and life is too strenuous for an employer to keep men on his payroll whose nerves are unsteady and whose brains are not clear.

Every line of business is beginning to close its doors to drinking men.

Drunkenness is a disease and like most diseases,—has its remedy. Orrine is the reliable treatment and is sold under a positive guarantee to effect a cure or your money will be refunded. Orrine is in two forms; No. 1 which can be used without the patient's knowledge in tea, coffee or food; and No. 2 for those who wish to be cured.

The guarantee applies to both forms. Mailed in plain, sealed package on receipt of $1.00. Write for free booklets, mailed in plain envelope. The Orrine Co., Washington, D. C., or Frank D. Hall.

May Refuse to Drink.

There is a movement among some of the graduates of the German universities to abolish compulsory drinking by members of the student corps. At present no one is admitted to these societies if he be an abstainer, and when students are initiated they are required to drink till almost intoxicated.

YACHT CLUB

Will Hold First Semi-Annual Meeting of Season Sunday at Buckeye Lake.

The first semi-annual meeting of the season for the Buckeye Lake Yacht club will be held at the club house at Buckeye Lake Sunday. The meeting will be called to order by Commodore Charles D. Lynch at 11 o'clock. It is hoped that there will be a good attendance of the members and every member is urged to invite a friend. There will be considerable business to transact. The different committees will report on the amusements for the coming season, including the water sports, which will be the event of the season. The matter of building additional boat stalls will also be discussed and acted upon, as will also the matter of building a large pavillion in front of the club house, a pier and other improvements calculated to make it pleasant for the members. A recess will be had at 1 o'clock for lunch. The club is in a very flourishing condition and it is hoped that this meeting will result in a large increase to its membership.

STABILITY OF FORTUNES

Experience has proven that fortunes invested in real estate have remained intact through more generations than when invested in any other form of property.

To the merchant and manufacturer, the owning of the property which he occupies means permanency of location. For the head of a family, the title to his home means the saving of rents and the possession of an asset constantly increasing in value. Values in real estate have been created by the growth of population. These are factors which tend to increase the demand for, and decrease the supply of real estate.

We are now building modern houses and will offer lots for sale, with or without houses, in my new addition, corner of Church and Eighth streets. Streets will be improved by paving, cement walks, gas and water to property lines. When all improvements are made these houses and lots will soon sell and you will have lost another opportunity to better your condition.

Can you afford to let this opportunity pass?

A Mysterious Spectacle—An Animate Woman Transformed from Inanimate Objects. At the Orphium Next Week.

A MYSTERIOUS SPECTACLE.

Newark play goers have seen or heard of Tori, Dida, Didacie, Phroso and other illusion acts that appear supernatural, but all of these are eclipsed by Creo, the wonderful transformation spectacle to be witnessed at the Orphium theater all next week, beginning Monday matinee. Creo is a real mystery, bewildering, and to the uninitiated, unsolvable. Creo begins where other illusions stop. Three pieces of wood a plaster bust, a few dashes of flesh color paint, a wig and some clothes and then a living, breathing and speaking woman steps to the foot lights. It is a startling act, and one that creates a sensation all over the country.

John A. Hawkins, known as the college athlete, is considered one of the world's greatest jumpers. His main feat being to jump over eight chairs, alighting or touching a plate of eggs without breaking them. Many other difficult tricks are performed, and his act should prove a big drawing card.
